Warplanes' Guns Rake Defenders Outside Makale

Aircraft Swoop Down on Ethiopian Group to Exchange Shots.

Fascist Legions Nearing the City

No Resistance Offered Army; Fight Reported in Northwest.

The Crisis Abroad.

The advance of the Italian columns continued beyond Hauzien. Planes machine-gunned Ethiopian troops in the vicinity of Makale and were greeted with sharp gun fire.

In Addis Ababa the Ethiopian government asserted 30 women and 15 children were killed in an air raid on Gorrahai in the south.

Students continued demonstrations against England throughout Italy as Mussolini, on the anniversary of Italy's victorious armistice with Austria, promised his nation "another victory."

In Geneva the proposal to include a coal-oil-iron-steel ban against Italy is being carefully handled by the negotiators with an eye on the United States and Germany. The belief that Italy and Ethiopia will fight to a finish gained strength.

On the March with the Italian Armies in Northern Ethiopia, Nov. 4.—Machine guns of low-flying Fascist warplane and hot rifle fire from thousands of massed Ethiopians roared out near Makale today in the path of the vast advance of Italy's northern armies.

Behind the fighting planes the Black Shirts of Gen. Ruggero Santini—one of four invading columns—swept up the highland commanding Mai Anesti, 18 miles southeast of Hauzien and on toward much wanted Makale, 20 miles deeper into the rockbound heart of Ethiopia. To their right two more columns, under Gens. Allessandro Pirzio-Biroli and Pietro Maravigna, pushed ahead. To their left, over the searing salt sands of the Danakil Desert, a "mystery column" of fierce Danakils hurried west.

Encounter Enemy.

Air squadron droning low over the region about Makale, taking photographs, making observations, encountered several thousand of the enemy gathering around the city.

Roaring down on the Ethiopians, they opened up with rattling machine guns and drew sharp fire from enemy riflemen.

The troops themselves, swarming through Hauzien and on from left and right today, had encountered the foe in no such numbers. Ras Seyoum, the Ethiopian northern war lord, had been reported lurking with some 15,000 troops in the Tembien Mountains, near Makale, but there were rumors today he had withdrawn to Amba Alaghi, south of that city.

(Air reconnaissance reports to Italy military authorities at Asmara, Eritrea, said Makale itself apparently was deserted by Ethiopian troops and that crowds of inhabitants today raised their arms to the fliers and waved white sheets as an invitation for the Fascists to occupy the city.

Negotiate Canyon.

(The war planes, however, sighted one group of enemy warriors breaking camp many miles south of Makale and starting to march in the direction of that city. They numbered several thousand, the reports said.

(Other groups were seen in the Tembien region.

(The extreme western column of Gen. Maravigna, however, successfully negotiated a deep canyon at the confluence of the Mai Carei and Mai Weri rivers without meeting resistance that had been feared.

(Maravigna's right wing, including a brigade of Africans backed up by Black Shirts of the Twenty-first of April Division, was engaged in clearing up the Adi Abo district.

(His other African brigade was leading and flanking the Twenty-third of March Black Shirt Division, which was proceeding toward Amba Salama.)

On the heels of advance patrols, Pirizo - Biroli's Askaris (native troops) pressed through Hauzien from the right (west), and Santini's Black Shirts from the left (east) at dawn this morning.

At that point they were one-third of the way to Makale.

Still farther to the west, Maravigna's column uncoiled down an-

Paris Reports Vatican Seeks War Solution

Paris, Nov. 4 (AP).—French officials disclosed the possibility today of a search for a solution of the Italo-Ethiopian war by the Vatican between now and the British elections, November 14.

The Vatican, it was said, is sounding out the capitals most involved.

Premier Pierre Laval will resume conversations tomorrow with British and Italian representatives.

Robbed of Jewels

PRINCESS MARIA DE BOURBON.

Gems of Prince And His Bride Stolen in Hotel

Juan of Spain and Wife, in Toronto on Trip, Lose $8,000 Jewelry.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Nov. 4.—Jewels valued at $8,000 were stolen today from the hotel suite of exiled Prince Juan of Spain, heir-presumptive to the Spanish throne, and his bride of three weeks, the former Princess Maria of Bourbon-Sicily.

The couple, on a honeymoon tour of the world, were at luncheon outside the city when the gems disappeared.

R. B. Wills, attorney for the prince, said that the loss consisted of brooches, bracelets and watches, and that everything was insured. The prince's orders, including the Jeweled Order of the Golden Fleece, were in the room, but were not taken.

Chief Constable D. C. Draper declined to discuss the matter, referring questioners to hotel officials, who also refused to talk.

The royal couple did not bring their most valuable jewels to this country, Wills added.

Niagara Falls is on the itinerary of the honeymooners.

Juan, who is 22, was married in Rome October 12. He and his bride were recent visitors to Washington.

Shoremen Boycott Ships of 3 States

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, ordered tonight a dockworkers' boycott against vessels of shipowners operating from Alabama, Louisiana and Texas ports, to become effective immediately.

Ryan said the boycott would be instituted "within 20 minutes" in North Atlantic ports, and added that he expected Pacific Coast longshoremen to take similar action.

The I. L. A. president decreed the boycott informally, but said his formal orders would be issued in an hour or less, after certain routine formalities were completed.

The boycott is based on alleged refusal of shipowners in the three Southern States to recognize the association as the agency for collective bargaining.

Premier King Coming Here To Spur Trade

New Canadian Leader May Be Guest at the White House.

Legation Staff Meets U. S. Experts to Act on Treaty.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada is coming to Washington this week to spur reciprocal trade negotiations between the two North American countries, it was reliably learned yesterday.

Details of the Canadian Prime Minister's visit were expected to be announced momentarily by him at Ottawa. It is understood that plans were being made here to have him spend a night at the White House as the guest of President Roosevelt. The State Department would neither deny nor confirm that aspect of his visit.

King, whose Liberal Party achieved a sweeping victory in the Canadian Parliamentary elections October 14, is keenly interested in increasing the flow of trade between his country and the United States and made that objective one of his campaign issues.

Negotiations for a reciprocal trade agreement, suspended prior to the October election, were aggressively resumed yesterday when a group of trade experts arrived here from Ottawa and, along with the legation staff here, immediately went into conference with the American trade experts.

Results Not Announced.

The progress made was not revealed, but on the conclusion of yesterday's session those participating seemed pleased over the results. It was believed that a more harmonious basis for an agreement could be worked out than that proposed some time ago by the Conservative Ministry of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett.

The proposed trade agreement with Canada is regarded as the most important of the negotiations now under way to spur American commerce. Canada is this country's second best customer, buying more in the American market than any country except the United Kingdom. Although the United States sells Canada more than it buys from that country, our largest imports come from the Dominion.

Thus, any stimulation of that trade, one way or the other, probably would mean more in dollars and cents to this country than similar action with any other nation except the United Kingdom. Consequently, the resumed trade negotiations have become of prime importance.

Arrangements Kept Secret.

Arrangements for the visit here of Prime Minister King have been handled by Norman Armour, the American Minister to Canada, and the State Department. Attaches of the latter late yesterday waved aside all inquiries with the explanation that they could say nothing. The Canadian Legation referred inquiries to the State Department.

The last time that a Canadian Prime Minister visited Washington was in April, 1933, when Bennett came here for a conference with President Roosevelt regarding plans for the abortive World Economic and Monetary Conference at London. At that time Bennett was deeply interested in lowering trade barriers between the two countries.

After their conference President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Bennett issued a joint statement in which they said, among other things, that they had discussed the trade situation and had agreed "to begin a search for means to increase the

New Anti-British Riots Staged By Students in Rome and Milan

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 4.—Angry Fascist students demonstrated in Rome and Milan against Great Britain today after their leader, Benito Mussolini, promised the nation another "victory."

Renewing outbursts against Britain of last week, bands of students paraded the capital shouting "down with England." They stripped English signs from buildings.

Similar demonstrations were held in Milan, where students massed in front of stores displaying British goods.

One merchant was forced to drape the Italian flag over a sign advertising British merchandise.

Soldiers in Milan and police in Rome were watchful, but made no move to interfere. The outbursts of anti-British feeling were caused by sanctions adopted by the League of Nations.

Premier Mussolini bowed his head in reverence in a mass for World War dead and kneeled at the altar of the Unknown Soldier. Then he raised his head in defiance as he shouted from his balcony: "This is a great day for the nation. Once again Italy will have as her prize victory!"

The nation observed the seventeenth anniversary of Italy's victorious armistice with Austria.

Il Duce, acknowledging the cheers of thousands from the balcony of his office, cried "today we are all engaged in a new battle." He stood for a long while with his arm upraised in the Fascist salute before speaking the few words.

Fascists joined in religious ceremonies for their war dead in every town and village. Il Duce set the example, followed everywhere by the Fascist party, of linking the

Spouse-Killer Calm as Jury Receives Case

Mrs. Joan Smith Breaks Down Briefly, Then Recovers Poise.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

Upper Marlboro, Md., Nov. 4.—The case of attractive 25-year-old Joan Dodd Smith, confessed slayer of her husband, was in the hands of a jury of farmers in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court here tonight.

Just before the jurors retired to ponder her fate on a manslaughter charge, blonde Mrs. Smith, one-time Laurel beautician, pleaded that the death of her husband, Wade LeRoy Smith, former policeman, was accidental.

After defense counsel had built up a formidable case of self-defense, Mrs. Smith said from the witness stand:

"I wasn't afraid of my husband."

Further cross-questioning by Frank M. Hall, assistant to State's Attorney Alan Bowie, brought from the comely defendant in a clear, strong voice:

"Didn't Point Gun."

"I did not point the gun. I had no thought of shooting him. I didn't think it was necessary to shoot to save my life."

Mrs. Smith said she "didn't alm in any way," and that she didn't recall having a hand on the trigger of the .32-caliber pistol which sent a bullet straight through the heart of her husband in the early hours of Sunday, July 28.

Aside from the slight upset of having the young widow ignore her former selfdefense plea in favor of claiming the killing was accidental, the trial was singularly unexciting.

The witnesses and the testimony were substantialy the same as when habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of Mrs. Smith were held in Judge Joseph C. Mattingly's court here last August.

Two judges, in addition to Mattingly, sat on the bench today, Judge Walter J. Mitchell, chief of the Cir-

Balmy Spell Ends With Rain Tonight

10-Degree Fall of Mercury Predicted Here.

A slight drop in temperatures and rain tonight will end the mild autumn weather which prevailed in Washington throughout the week-end and yesterday, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

The mercury will sink about 10 degrees, the change caused by an eastward-traveling cold snap, the forecaster said. Sub-zero temperatures and snow in the extreme Northern States will not reach the District, however.

Yesterday the temperature reached a maximum of 66 degrees at 2:30 p. m., climbing slowly from a minimum of 57 at 6 a. m. Except for cloudiness, the weather was autumn at its best.

6 States Vote Today in Test Of New Deal

'Roosevelt in '36' Made Issue in Kentucky, Jersey and N. Y.

President, Still Silent, Is to Cast Ballot at Hyde Park.

Elections Today.

New York—State Assembly, two State Senators and two Representatives in Congress to be elected, along with numerous judges and mayors.

Kentucky—Governor and State ticket to be chosen. Bitter Democratic split over governorship adds to interest.

New Jersey—State Assembly and 8 of 21 State Senators to be selected.

Philadelphia—Mayoralty election.

Virginia—Members of General Assembly and county officials will be voted on.

Mississippi—Voters will ratify selections for various State offices made in primary balloting.

By the Associated Press.

Seeking weather-vane indications of how the big political winds of 1936 may blow, national chieftains of both the Democratic and Republican parties last night were primed for closest scrutiny of today's State elections.

With some national issues superimposed upon local political rivalries and the play of personalities which accompanies them, New York and New Jersey will elect State legislators and Kentucky a governor. In addition, New York will choose two members of the National House of Representatives and Kentucky a third.

Meanwhile, Philadelphia's citizens will choose a mayor and Virginia and Mississippi will go through the routine of ratifying candidates for State offices already selected in Democratic primary elections.

Roosevelt to Vote.

President Roosevelt will vote in person at his home town of Hyde Park, New York, symbolizing, perhaps, the national tinge that has been given the election there by spokesmen for both of the old line parties.

Melvin C. Eaton, Republican State chairman, has repeatedly appealed for votes as a repudiation of the New Deal, and his latest assertion was a prediction that the result would be "the most severe setback for Roosevelt re-election hopes received thus far."

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who is a New York State as well as National Democratic chairman, also raised a broad national question from the other side of the political dividing line. He was confident, he said, that the outcome "would reflect the satisfaction of the people that complete prosperity is nearly here."

President's Home State.

The New York election has further national implications in the fact that it is President Roosevelt's home State and that his close friend and supporter, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, has called for the election of a Democratic State Assembly.

Whether or not, here and elsewhere, national issues have been artificially injected, as some contend, rather than flowing naturally

Kidnaping Suspect Is Arrested Here

Jerry Riley, Cigar Dealer, Denies Detroit Charge.

Sought by Michigan police since 1928 as a kidnaping suspect, Jerry Riley, 38, of Detroit, was arrested here yesterday on a warrant charging abduction, extortion and kidnaping of Charles Mattler, a former produce merchant, also of Detroit.

Riley was apprehended by Detective Sergts. Joseph W. Shimon and Richard Cox, of the Headquarters Fugitive Squad, in a cigar store which he operated in the 600 block Fifth street northwest. He told police he had been here since 1928.

When brought to Police Headquarters Riley said his name was Andrew Joseph Mack. After questioning he admitted to police he was Jerry Riley, but denied any knowledge of the kidnaping. He was charged with being a fugitive from justice and said he would fight extradition.

Chief of Detroit Detectives Frank Frahm said he would send extradition papers immediately when notified of Riley's arrest. Five other men were also in the case, Frahm said. They held Mattler captive for six days.

Riley was released in $3,000 bail pending a Police Court hearing today. He probably will fight extradition later before Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of District Supreme Court.

Detroit police reported four other men already have drawn long prison sentences for their part in the Mettler abduction, including Louis Rose, Jerry Mullane, Harry Hallisey and Roy Cornelius.

Mettler was kidnaped in front of the home of a woman friend. A brother gained his release, police said, by paying ransom of $14,800.

Cutter Is Rushed To Sea Rescues

Inhabitants, Frightened, Shunning Streets of Resort City.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 4 (AP).—A ship was sending up rockets, apparently in signal of distress, off Miami Beach tonight.

The vessel was almost immediately opposite the Roney Plaza Hotel. It seemed to be about three-quarters of a mile from shore.

Persons at the hotel said she appeared to be a combined freighter and passenger steamer.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 4 (U.P.).—The Florida hurricane will strike the peninsula's west coast near Everglades City between 9 p. m. and midnight, the Weather Bureau warned tonight.

The storm now is central over the uninhabitated Everglades sections about 35 to 40 miles west-southwest of Miami, moving slowly west-southwest, the report said.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 4.—A hurricane with winds of 83 miles an hour struck Miami and swept southward tonight along the Florida Keys toward Key West.

Reports from Miami during the height of the storm said at least four persons were killed. Full extent of the damage could not be determined immediately.

The deaths were those of a mother and her baby who walked into a live wire during the storm, and of a man and a 13-year-old girl killed in the collapse of houses in the northwest section of the city.

A radio report from Miami received here said conditions were such that no one could venture out on the streets.

Ships also were imperiled, but reports early tonight indicated none was in any immediate danger.

The first of the hurricane winds brought a blow of 66 miles an hour.

Barometer's Big Drop.

At Miami there was a lull when the center of the storm passed, and then the winds speeded up to 83 miles an hour.

The city felt the blow for sever hours. The barometer dropped low as 28.73 inches.

At Dinner Key, base for Pan-American Airways flying boats, an unofficial wind velocity of 100 miles an hour was reported.

The Tropical Radio Teleg. Co. at Boston was advised late the day that all towers of its ami station were down and t. building housing its transmitters was leaking badly.

The Weather Bureau at Jacksonville said the hurricane apparently was traveling southward after leaving Miami and probably would strike Key West tonight.

The Norwegian freighter Sneland, which earlier had reported it was being driven toward shore off the Florida east coast near Fort Lauderdale, wirelessed Coast Guard headquarters here tonight it was no longer in any danger. The message, relayed here by the cutter Saukee, said:

"Weather decreasing. Wind still strong and sea rough. Barometer slowly rising. Conditions now better. At present no danger."

Centers Over Everglades.

A late bulletin by the Jacksonville Weather Bureau said the tropical storm, which has a small diameter, was centered over the Everglades about 30 miles west of Miami, apparently moving west southwestward about 12 miles an hour.

The bulletin said gales were subsiding but tides continued high on the southeast Florida coast.

Red Cross officials decided against the movement of a train into the Everglades to bring out residents of the Lake Okeechobee area. Officials expressed the belief the storm was moving away from the lake.

In 1928 a hurricane tossed up great walls of water over the banks of the lake and more than 2,000 persons were drowned.

Taking precautions against the recurrence of the Labor Day disaster on the Florida Keys when about 400 persons, including many war veterans were drowned when a hurricane pushed water over the small islands, relief workers today evacuated those now living on the Keys.

Palm Beach and West Palm Beach, reported earlier in the path of the storm, escaped with rain squalls and high seas that were Woman Falls Off Porch.

Mrs. Sarah Moskowitz, 53, was seriously injured yesterday when she fell or jumped from a second-floor porch at her home, 1412 Irving street northwest. Physicians at Emergency Hospital said she had possible fractures of the spine and shoulder and severe cuts to her face and hands.

Former Nurse, U. S. Employe, Ends Life Here

Helen Welch Takes Gas; Had Sought Death a Week Ago.

She was a "natural born" comedienne. She liked to laugh and joke and play. At heart she was an actress—life was her stage, her friends the audience.

They told this about Helen Welch, 29-year-old graduate nurse, yesterday. But they told it in whispers outside the door of her apartment in the 1400 block of Park road northwest. Inside, on the kitchen floor, Helen Welch lay dead—a suicide.

She had been dead many hours before an employe of the Washington Gaslight Co. forced the apartment door, turned off five open gas jets on the kitchen range and opened the windows.

From all indications, her life was over early Sunday night. She herself had rung down the curtain. On a row of chairs, she had stretched out in front of the stove. Then she reached over, opened the oven door and turned on the gas.

Throughout the night and during yesterday's early morning hours, complaints had reached the resident manager. Other residents of the apartment building smelled escaping gas. The hallways reeked with it. The odor even reached to the street.

Investigator Sent.

Shortly before noon yesterday, the Gaslight Co. sent Ernest G. Murray to investigate. In the basement, he found that Miss Welch's gas meter was the only one registering. Then he found her on the floor. It was several minutes before police and friends could remain in the gas-filled apartment.

A sister, Miss Gladys Welch, of Bethesda, Md., could say nothing to aid the investigators. And neither could Miss Margaret Bushey, the dead girl's roommate. The sister was hysterical. But Miss Bushey, a little calmer, told what she knew.

Miss Welch, she said, had always been "happy-go-lucky." She was alone in the apartment over the week-end, but appeared in the best of spirits on Saturday. There were no men friends, no financial troubles, no illness.

From other sources, police learned

Buying Power Upswing Seen For Next Year

10 Per Cent Increase in Industrial Production Forecast by U. S.

By Robert C. Albright.

A general improvement of conditions on both farm and business fronts, carrying industrial production next year 10 per cent above 1935 levels, with corresponding advances in consumer buying power and some credit expansion, yesterday was forecast by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Bolstering President Roosevelt's recent "good news" statement, the bureau's highly optimistic farm outlook coincided with formal proclamation of a two-year corn-hog program by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Although details of the program were undetermined, Wallace proposes restoration of hog production to a maximum 100 per cent of base output, which means 30 per cent more pigs may be raised next year. The AAA will ask some restriction in corn acreage—probably a maximum of 25 per cent—to guard against a run-away hog crop in 1937.

"Adequate participation in another program was apparently assured when approximately 950,000 producers voted 6.3 to 1 in favor of continuing corn and hog adjustment," the AAA said in an accompanying statement.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics' outlook report was prepared following consultation with State farm extension economists and AAA experts. Presaging a general industrial pick-up in 1936, the bureau predicted an increased demand for farm products, and discussed detailed prospects for some 50 farm commodities.

"It appears that the trend of industrial activity and of consumer buying power, which has been generally upward in the United States and in many foreign countries during the last three years, will probably continue through the next two or three years," the report stated.

"The general price level in the United States and in many foreign countries may continue to advance during the same period, though possibly not at a rate as rapid as the increase in industrial production unless monetary or credit inflation

Coast Guard, Red Cross Rush Aid to Gale-Stricken Florida

Washington headquarters of two great relief agencies—the United States Coast Guard and American Red Cross—were spurred to action by first word of the newest hurricane in Florida yesterday.

Under emergency orders, four Coast Guard cutters steamed at top speed to aid vessels reported in distress off the Florida coast. A motorcade of Red Cross buses, ordered to the stricken area by Chairman Cary T. Grayson, was on hand to aid in the possible evacuation of affected sections—principally the Lake Okeechobee and Keys districts.

Officials at local Coast Guard headquarters, 1512 H street northwest, mobilized their forces, dispatched four speedy cutters and ordered others to "stand by." The Coast Guard base at Fort Lauderdale was isolated by a 72-mile-an-hour wind. The commanding officer notified headquarters here that the radio antennae was down and several buildings had been demolished.

With a number of private and commercial vessels radioing distress signals, the cutters Saukee and Colfax were dispatched from Mayport, the Yamacraw from Hattaras and the Modoc from Wilmington, Del. Four ships—two liners, a freighter and a yacht—were reported by local authorities to have sent S O S calls.

When George E. Myer, a Red Cross worker in Miami, telephoned long distance to the local bureau yesterday, officials here said that his voice could barely be heard above the hurricane's roar. Maurice Reddy, assistant director of disaster relief for the Red Cross, and John W. Maloney and Bert Pester, disaster workers, left late yesterday for the storm zone.

pushed back by the wind over the beach boslevard.

The yacht Lone Star, owned by Frederick H. Prince, of oBston, was blown up on a sand bar at Miami, indicating waterfront damage.

oMtorists fleeing along the Tamiami Trail from the storm brought reports to Ochopee of property damage. Ochopee is 70 miles west of Miami.

The tsorm first struck the coast at Fort Lauderdale, where is unroofed houses, broke windows and sent the water from canals overflowing into the streets.

Fort Lauderdale, however, after a check-up said the damage in the city proper would be comparatively small.

Coast Guard divisional headquarters at Jacksonville received a report by radio from its Fort Lauderdale base that several buildings there were demolished and others damaged.

Cutter Rushes to Rescue.

The Fort Lauderdale base is on an island ad because of the high water it was impossible to get there for a check-upq on the damage.

The cutter Saranac had been sent to the aid of the Sneland, after receipt of the first report.

The Sneland, a Norwegian boat, carried a crew of about 19 and was bound for Cuba from Savannah, Ga., to pick up a cargo for a Canadian port. It cleared out of New York for Cuba October 19.

The ship's master had reported he could not maneuver the vessel and was drifting toward shore, when he reported hurricane winds and mountainous seas were pounding the vessel.

Coast Guard headquarters at Jacksonville said the freighter Florida, after battling high seas, was anchored 5 miles south of Jupiter.

Reduced Apple Crop Forecast For Five Years

U. S. Report Also Anticipates Increase in Foreign Competition.

By the Associated Press.

A decrease in national apple production during the next five years as compared with the last five was predicted yesterday by the Agriculture Department.

Simultaneously the department warned in its annual outlook that if the average volume of production of the last few years, especially of late apples, is to be maintained 10 to 15 years from now "moderate increases in replacements and plantings will be necessary." This activity will be necessary because of the "recent excessive damage from drought and cold weather and continued heavy deterioration and removal of small farm orchards and generally unprofitable commercial orchards."

Restrictions Cited.

The outlook noted indications that exporters of apples may expect increased competition in foreign markets, since foreign countries are working toward increased production and improved quality. Recent tendencies of many countries to impose trade restrictions continue to be an unfavorable factor in the apple trade, the outlook said.

The prediction of decreased production was based on figures showing that from 1910 to 1925 there was a net decrease of 79,100,000 apple trees in the United States, while from 1925 to 1930 there was another net decrease of 21,700,000 trees, making "a total decrease of 100,800,000 trees, or 46 per cent in the 20-year period, 1910-30."

Producing Capacity Grows.

"It is estimated," the department said, "that since 1930 a further decrease of at least 20,000,000 trees has occurred, bringing the total of all apple trees in commercial and farm orchards down to about 96,000,000."

Despite this decrease in the number of trees, the outlook said that "potential producing capacity of all orchards has been nearly maintained by an increase in the average producing capacity per bearing tree of about 30 per cent."

Road Chief Hails New Accounting System

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—State Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley today praised the new accounting system installed in his department by State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs, but predicted a full year would be required for clerical employes to operate the system most efficiently.

The commissioner said he expected the plan to accomplish a considerable improvement in departmental bookkeeping after the accounts thoroughly mastered it.

Between You and Me

Quiet Interlude—Will It Last? Relief Ballyhoo; Two Bosses at the NRA.

By Raymond Clapper

SHREWDLY, President Roosevelt is singing low. He promised a breathing spell and is giving it. Nothing was more welcome. The country had a case of jitters. Peace and quiet were essential.

The soothing-down process began when, after the jumpy windup of Congress which left the country somewhat shell-shocked, Mr. Roosevelt left the United States for almost a month. He returned for a few days' stopover in Washington and then went to Hyde Park. Again during the latter part of the month he will be at his Georgia Warm Springs retreat.

It is not flippant, nor a stretching of the facts to say that when Mr. Roosevelt leaves Washington, everything quiets down. The reason is obvious. When Mr. Roosevelt is in Washington, officials are rushing in with problems that require decisions. They rush out with statements. Senators and other visitors go to the White House and come out and make public statements. There is a constant stream of noisy activity. Mr. Roosevelt has a dramatic way of conducting public business so that the effect upon the Nation's ears is that of steady shell-fire at the White House.

When Mr. Roosevelt leaves Washington most of this racket stops. Secluded at Hyde Park, Mr. Roosevelt sees few visitors and the reporters there see fewer still. It is possible there for Mr. Roosevelt practically to shut off the flow of news by refraining from announcing anything. It is not possible to do that in Washington where the visitors are more easily buttonholed.

Continuation of this quiet for some time to come will greatly strengthen Mr. Roosevelt in the opinion of some of his close friends. Whether, when he returns to Washington, he can continue this atmosphere of quiet and serenity and keep jarring sounds from getting out on the Washington sounding board is a question. If he can he will be much better off. People are tired of dramatics at Washington. They are enjoying the intermission.

Mr. Roosevelt probably would have been better off had he conducted the works relief program with less striving for the spectacular. After a year of ballyhoo about taking people off of relief and putting them to work, expenditures for direct relief continue to exceed those of a year ago, there are several hundred thousand fewer persons on work relief now than were on relief employment under the old FERA setup a year ago. At the peak of the old FERA, 2,500,000 persons were on work relief. The latest report of WPA shows 1,500,000 on work relief, less than half of the number called for under the program.

In other words, apparently ground has actually been lost in providing work relief during the year in which the Administration has been going through the spectacular hocus-pocus about taking people off of relief doles and putting them to work. They were making real headway toward this objective under the old Hopkins organization. But the impulse to tinker, to try a new experiment, to do something dramatic was irresistible.

Odd things are happening at NRA, which was supposed to be practically dead. Even there, the Administration's weakness in organization and administrative matters is becoming conspicuous again.

The acting administrator of NRA is Laurence J. Martin. He was made such by an executive order of August 24.

But one month later Mr. Roosevelt, without amending that order in any way, delegated Maj. George L. Berry as "co-ordinator for industrial co-operation." The order made Berry responsible directly to the President, not only in the conduct of industrial conferences looking to maintenance of business and labor standards, but "to co-ordinate and report to the President on matters relating to appointment, employment, discharge, compensation and duties of officers and employes of the National Recovery Administration."

That would seem to make him NRA administrator but Martin's appointment as acting administrator was not rescinded nor was his authority curtailed. In fact it wasn't even defined in the original order.

Six States Cast Ballots Today; New Deal Test

from local candidates and issues, the general results will be seized upon for political capital by whichever party they seem to favor.

In additjon to the fight for seats in the New York General Assembly, where the Democrats now hold a margin of three, two vacancies in the State Senate will be filled, two members of the National House of Representatives will be chosen in New York City, and numerous judicial and mayoralty posts are at issue.

Relief Bonds an Issue.

Perhaps closer to the web of national issues than any other single question, the Empire State's voters will decide, too, whether they shall authorize a $35,000,000 bond issue for relief purposes. Lehman has warned that the alternative is higher taxes.

With former Senator Walter E. Edge terming the contest "the first and most important round in the Presidential election of 1936," New Jersey will elect an entire State Assembly and fill 8 of 21 seats in the State Senate.

Both houses at present are Republican, the Senate by 15 to 6 and the Assembly by 34 to 26. In advance of the decsiion both parties claimed that gains were in prospect. The Republicans with 8 holdover senators among the 15 whose seats were not in contest, needed to elect but three of the eight to rtain control.

New Deal Issue in Kentucky.

In Kentucky the bitterest, bolting party split in years has been accompanied by such admonitions from New Deal protagonists, Senator Barkley among others, as: "Show approval of the New Deal by electing the Democratic State ticket," and "A vote for the Republican candidate is a vote against Roosevelt next year."

Meanwhile, two political youngsters, Lieut. Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, 37 years old, Democracy's candidate, and Judge King Swope, 41, Republican nominee, have been engaged in a hammer-and-tongs campaign.

Swope has avoided reference to national affairs, but has attacked the present State administration for "waste and extravagance," and swung upon Chandler as part of it. Paradoxically, he has hope of votes from that faction of the party headed by Gov. Ruby Laffoon, who is at odds with Chandler over Laffoon's sales tax.

Laffoon Fights Chandler.

Laffoon has asked that the people rebuke Chandler for "betraying" his administration. Otherwise he is supporting Democratic candidates.

In Philadelphia, traditional home of unbridled political warfare, the Democrats are seeking to consolidate recent State-wide gains by electnig John B. Kelly to the mayor's chair. His opponent is S. Davis Wilson, who was elected city comptroller two years ago on a combined Town Meeting-Democratic ticket. He is a Republican now.

Republican campaigners stressed national issues, contending that Wilson's election would facilitate recapture of the State next year and perhaps of the country as well. The Democrats have denied the logic of that argument. Kelly, meanwhile, has concentrated his attack upon years of "corruption and misrule" in city hall.

No Roosevelt Comment

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt spent another quiet day at home today, but his calendar called very definitely for casting a ballot tomorrow in the State Assembly election.

The Presidential silence which has prevailed since Mr. Roosevelt's return home last week was maintained tonight for tomorrow's election, but there was no doubt of the wishes of the President for a Democratic victory.

Mr. Roosevelt has taken no part in the State election in accordance with announced intentions to participate in no State contest. However, his presence here for the last week has shown the interest of Mr. Roosevelt in the campaign.

After voting tomorrow it is expected the President will remain here until the latter part of the week, enjoying the relaxation of the home stay and waiting for the repairs on the White House to be completed.

Danville Prison Farm Saves $6,000 a Year

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Nov. 4.—The operation of the city farm has saved the city $6,000 this year, according to City Engineer C. L. Scott. The cost of maintaining prisoners in the city jail has been reduced from 83 cents to 25 cents a day because the prisoners raise practically all their food.

During the height of production surplus food was turned over to the Danville Social Service for distribution among the poor, thus saving some of the expense in their upkeep.

Quarry to Open Soon.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 4.—The Rock Cut Quarry, near Corriganville, will be placed in operation by November 15, it was announced yesterday by the Cumberland Cement and Supply Co. Necessary buildings and equipment are now being placed at the site, it was said. An initial blast, planned on that date, will loosen many tons of the limestone rock. Two tons of dynamite will be used.

Fire Probers Take Prints.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Weston, W. Va., Nov. 4.—Fingerprints of more than 1,200 inmates of the Weston State Hospital are being taken for the Federal Department of Justice and in efforts to ascertain who set several fires to the institution, one of which caused a loss of $150,000. The task will be prolonged, as only 60 prints a day are being taken.

Buying Power Upswing Seen For Next Year

10 Per Cent Increase in Industrial Production Forecast by U. S.

becomes a factor in raising the general price level."

Peering into the 1936 business crystal, the bureau forecast as follows:

Impetus to credit expansion, influenced by improved business outlook, high bank reserves and low money rates.

An increase of 10 per cent in consumer buying power.

A 10 per cent gain in industrial workers' income.

A rise of 10 per cent in industrial production.

Factory pay rolls to climb as industrial production increases.

"Greatest advances" in durable goods industries.

Expansion in railway supply purchases and increased railroad earnings.

Building activity "appreciably higher," influenced by 50 to 100 per cent increase in residential construction.

Continued recovery in automobile industry.

Price Prediction Dodged.

Advanced as an index to the probable level of consumer buying power for agricultural products, this survey of business prospects led up to the prediction:

"The demand for farm products in 1936 is likely to be greater than in 1935."

The report hedged slightly on the question of prices—a subject that has caused the AAA no end of trouble with consumer groups, concerned at the recent price climb.

"As long as there remains a surplus of unutilized productive capacity, it seems probable that the use of buying power made available through expansion of bank credit will be reflected more in an increased output of goods than in higher prices," the report stated.

It remarked that such a development took place after 1876 and 1898, when deposits of national banks practically doubled. In both periods there was a rapid advance in industrial production, with prices rising much more slowly, the bureau noted.

New Corn-Hog Program.

The report said "it does not seem probable" credit will expand much more rapidly in 1936 than it has in the last two years.

In proclaiming a new, two-year corn-hog program yesterday, Secretary Wallace made clear that full details of the new program will not be determined until termination this week of conferences between farmers, State farm specialists and AAA officials.

Striving for a balance between the production and consumption of hogs, Wallace said the AA is motivated by three objectives.

Prevention of an excess production of corn in 1936 and 1937.

Allowance of an increase in next year's pig crop that would be at least as great as is estimated would take place if no adjutsment program were in effect.

Prevention of an excessive increase in the 1937 pig crop.

Base Production Off.

To this end, the AAA said it is recommending that corn production next year be imited to 95,000,000 acres, or about 10,000,000 acres less than probably would be harvested without adjustment. This would mean an adjustment of approximately 20 per cent on the part of all contract signers. The last program restricted corn output a minimum of 10 and a maximpm of 30 per cent. A 25 per cent maximum limitation is being considered for the 1937 program.

Desire of officials to increase hog production next year may be attributed to present shortages brought about by the drought and past reduction programs, and consequent catapulting pork prices. The AAA was unable to relieve thsi siuation in the last program, due to the time it takes to increase breeding stock and bring the offspring to market weights.

This year farmers were unabe to reach 90 per cent of base production, although permitted to do so by the AAA. Should they attain 100 per cent of base, under the new contract, it is estimated 30 per cent more pigs will be slaughtered in 1936-37.

that another sister—a younger sister—had hanged herself in Maryland last year. Miss Welch has grieved, but that was not regarded as a possible motive for her own suicide. Investigators learned tlso that Miss Welch had attempted to kill herself last week, but was frustrated by friends. At that time, she vowed never to do it again and laughed it off.

In the living room, beneath a burning light, the young woman had left a note. It read: "Notify my sister at Wisconsin——." That was all.

Miss Welch was a graduate nurse—class of 1931, Georgetown University Hospital. She had nto followed her profession in two years, however. She was employed in the alcohol tax unit, Treasury Department.

At Georgetown Hospital yesterday, those who knew Miss Welch described her as "a natural born actress—always clowning and full of fun."

Her parents are both dead, police reported.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

exchange of commodities between outh two countries, and thereby promote not only economic betterment on the North American Continent, but also the general improvement of world conditions."

Seek to Lift Trade Bars.

Following the failure of the London conference this determination was permitte dto lag until after the passage of the reciprocal trade agrements act in June, 1934, when the Canadians again brought up the question of removing trade barriers betwen the two countries.

Former Canadian Minister W. D. Herridge a year ago outlined the viewpoint of his government in a note to Secretary Hull, which, however, did not arouse any enthusiasm here because of Canadian insistence on a 50 per cent reduction in the American tariff on lumber, fish, potatoes, milk and cream, live cattle and other farm products.

Hull replied, expressing a desire to undertake negotiations, but pointing out that "in advance of negotiations this Government cannot make any commitment as to whether it will be possible to agree to a reduction in the rates of duty on particular products."

Negotiations Begun, Stopped.

Formal negotiations between the United States and Canada on a proposed trade pact were announced January 21. Hearings were held by the United States Tariff Commission March 11. Thereafter, the negotiations proceeded in a leisurely manner and were suspended when it was decided to hold elections in Canada in October. These negotiations were resumed yesterday.

(Small Ethiopian bands fled before them as they penetrated the lowlands, with camels bearing small guns and heavy loads of supplies.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The long-awaited abandonment of the silver standard at Shanghai, announced overnight, held the attention of foreign exchange traders throughout the world yesterday.

The Shanghai dollar dipped to 29.87 cents for a time and around midday was off 1.12½ cents at New York at 30 cents. Hongkong dollars, seeking a new level with the other leading Chinese unit, slipped down to 38.00 cents in the American market, and later rallied to 38.12½, off 4.12½ cents.

European currencies were not apparently particularly influenced in relation to the dollar by the Far Eastern developments. The pound sterling advanced to $4.92¼ in New York, while earlier, in London, the dollar gave ground at 4.92¾ to the pound. Paris political uneasiness was said to have induced offerings of French francs in London.

In New York the French unit held unchanged at 6.59 cents, but earlier in Paris the dollar had lifted to the equivalent of 6.587 cents to the franc.

The guilder lost .04 of a cent in New York at 67.93 cents, but there was no change in the Swiss franc rate at 32.51 cents. Lire improved .03 of a cent at 8.11 cents.

Husband-Killer Is Calm as Jury Receives Case

Mrs. Joan Smith Breaks Down Briefly, Then Recovers Poise.

cuit Court, and Judge William M. Loker.

Court convened at 10 a. m. For the next hour and a half it was occupied in selecting the jury. Attorneys for the defense, J. Wilson Ryon and Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland State Senate, used all 20 challenges permitted them. The State used nine. One prospective juror asked to be excused, nine others were dismissed when they professed scruples against capital punishment. In all, 51 persons were called before a jury, consisting mostly of farmers and including two colored men, was selected. Murray L. Ball, of Bladensburg, was foreman.

Mrs. Smith, throughout the day's proceedings was noticeably jittery. In the morning she kept on the black kid gloves which matched her tunic dress and smart black hat. She constantly twisted a green and brown handkerchief, frequently pressing the ball of linen hard against her cheek.

Breaks Down Once.

Only once did she break down. That was when State's Attorney Bowie dragged from a brown paper bag the blood-stained shirt her husband was wearing when she shot him. As Bowie exhibited the white garment with its brownish splotches, the slender blonde cried into the limp green and brown handkerchief.

But that was before she climbed to the witness stand at 3 in the afternoon. By that time she had herself pretty well under control and needed no more prodding than the other witnesses to "speak up so the jury can hear you."

Her father, A. S. Dodd, employe of the Laurel Race Track, was constantly by her side until she had to leave him to testify. Her mother was ill and unable to attend court. Among the witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Harrison, of Laurel, half-sister and brother-in-law of the defendant.

Defense counsel, through cross-questioning several members of the State and county police force, established the fact that the slain man had a "moderate disposition until he lost his temper and then it was very bad." Smith was a Maryland State trooper until about a year ago when he resigned to become an automobile salesman at the request of his wife.

Attended Theater.

It was one of his fits of temper which led to the fatal shooting, the defense attempted to prove. Mrs. Smith told how she and her husband with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon D. Herberson, of Baltimore, had attended a matinee in the afternoon preceding the slaying. In the words of Defense Attorney Ryon, they had a "lovable afternoon."

That night the four of them, accompanied by Herberson's mother and one of her women friends, a Mrs. Violet Skaggs, attended a fireman's carnival at Jessups, Md.

According to the testimony of the Herberson trio, as well as that of Mrs. Smith, the party had a fine time and acted "just like a bunch of children." The Smiths won a set of dishes, two ashtrays and had a tintype made, which was inserted in a barrel-shaped cardboard frame. On the frame was printed "a barrel of love." The "barrel of love" within a few hours was to embroil the couple in a dispute which ended with Smith toppling to the floor of the Laurel bungalow bedroom with a bullet wound through his heart.

church with the State and religion with patriotism.

Catholic youth organizations yesterday heard Dr. Gedda, president of the Association of Young Catholics assert justice was of the highest importance, "but justice in this case is not on the shores of Lake Geneva, but on the banks of the Iber."

Sing in Streets.

Before the demonstrations started, ouths marched around Rome singing popular songs with lines changed to show contempt for "the inn of nations, where they imposed sanctions."

But their elders busied themselves with the serious business of the economic battle with 50 nations. Food restrictions will go into effect tomorrow. Butcher shops will be closed on Tuesdays.

Italy, an authoritative source said tonight, has not wavered from her intention to adhere to the League of Nations unless her position at Geneva becomes completely impossible.

Italy already definitely has declared her intention to endure economic sanctions, it was pointed out, although she has protested against them. Unless sanctions progress into military measures, it was said officially, Mussolini is not likely to alter this policy.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

National Symphony Orchestra; Hans Kindler, conductor; Margaret Harshaw, contralto, soloist; Constitution Hall, Sunday afternoon. Program: Chorale, "Christus lag in Todesbanden," from Cantata No. 4 (Bach), "Che faro senza Euridice" (Gluck), "Don Juan" (Richard Strauss), "Nuages" and "Fetes" (Debussy), "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix" (Saint-Saens), Waltz from "Yevgen Onyegin" (Chaikovski).

Wearing modestly the invisible laurels acquired at his appearances as guest conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, Hans Kindler resumed direction of the National Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon, and officiated as musical godfather for the Washington debut of the promising American contralto, Margaret Harshaw, recent winner of the Schubert Memorial award. Both the returning director and the debutante were very cordially received by an audience that waxed enthusiastic at every opportunity for applause.

Miss Harshaw made a good impression with the simplicity of her manner and the freshness of her tone. Fortunate in the endowment of a voice ample in volume and appealing in quality, she used it with surety in the Gluck aria. Purity of intonation, accuracy of attack and suavity of phrasing were in evidence, and her reading had an assurance unexpected in a comparatively inexperienced singer.

She would have been wiser, however, to have chosen for her second selection something less dramatically exigent than the familiar luring song of Dalila. Therein her breathing was not always adjusted to the phrases as it should have been, and the line was sacrificed to emphasis. The breath control remained steady, but its application went slightly astray. Moreover, there was some hesitancy in her dramatic sense that held the full tone in abeyance when it should have been released, and the aria was not built up to an effective climax.

With so naturally fine a voice, Miss Harshaw should go far. Her tone production is open and free, and the color in invariably clear. Experience will do away with a certain tentativeness that at present works to her disadvantage.

Dr. Kindler opened the program, as he so often does, with music of stately and noble dimensions. The introduction to the Bach chorale swung open mighty portals upon inspired moments of devotional intoning.

The symphonic poem by Richard Strauss was given an energetic and exciting performance, from the first utterance of the Don Juan theme, that apt characterization of masculine vanity, to the ominous dissonance of the catastrophe. In taking Lenau's poem as the program for his music, Strauss departed, as Mozart did not, from the original conception of the hero.

When Tirso de Molina created the figure of Don Juan Tenorio in his play, "El Burlador de Sevilla," he little dreamed that the lusty scamp would some day be transformed into the great lover, and his innumerable escapades be interpreted symbolically as man's search for the ideal woman. Don Juan was, in his primal appearance, nothing more than a practical joker whose humor took the form of the stratagems and deceits of amorous intrigue.

The two Debussy nocturnes were treated with discriminative feeling that brought out their contrasts effectively. The shifting outlines and vague tonalities of "Nuages" stood in sharp opposition to the brilliant lights and hectic gayety of "Fetes." The Chaikovski waltz served its purpose well as a rousing finale.

Dr. Kindler pressed his musicians a little to hard at times, particularly in the Strauss tone-poem, which had some passages of doubtful clarity, and overstressed dynamics. And the theme of the Chaikovski waltz was announced with a potency that took something of the climatic effect away from the final reprise.

Interesting Menus Made Possible by New Adaptations of Old Favorite Recipes

Cheese Fits Into Scores Of Menu Uses

Possibilities of the Dairy Product for Any Meal Cited.

CHEESE FOR breakfast, cheese for luncheon, cheese for dinner!

So many smart meals come to the table these days with cheese as their principal attraction that we are astounded at the menu-possibilities of this versatile dairy product.

Meal planners everywhere are finding that cheese fits into a thousand menu uses. Whatever the meal or the occasion, some one of the many kinds of cheese available today will be found to add a special and inspired goodness. Because cheese represents such high food value at low cost, and fits so agreeably into the main dish of a meal, many an attractive menu can be built around its sturdy sustenance.

Cheese and Rice Souffle.

One of the most delightful of all cheese main dishes for luncheon or supper is a cheese and rice souffle—piping hot, light as the first falling flake of snow and appetite-satisfying as only cheese, with its highly concentrated, golden goodness can be. The economy of this dish would be sufficient to arouse the respect and love of any budget-weary hostess. But it will be cherished for its sheer delight to the appetite, and for the honest way it has of sticking to the ribs.

A menu built around this admirable and inexpensive cheese dish might be most agreeably begun with chilled tomato juice. The cheese and rice souffle, served the moment it comes out of the oven in casserole fashion, should be accompanied by buttered green beans. The combination of cheese and rice, as colored as a field of grain with a fresh vegetable, is one that is irresistible to the eye, and most certainly irresistible to the autumn-whetted appetite. A pear and pineapple, or stuffed apricot salad provides a subtle complement to this main course. A topping-off with spicy gingerbread and lemon sauce completes a dinner which is partified enough to be served to a visiting countess, and economical enough to please any right thinking budget.

The rice and cheese souffle which is guaranteed to be the hit of any dinner is quite simple to make. Prepare it by the following recipe:

Cheese and Rice Souffle.

Add three well-beaten egg yolks to two cups medium white sauce, add one cup cooked rice which has been thoroughly drained. Add one teaspoon salt and one teaspoon chili sauce. Fold in one-half pound sharp American cheese, grated, and the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a greased baking dish and bake in a slow oven.

Economy and goodness are the theme song of many other interesting and palatable cheese dishes. Try this cheese fondue and bake it in individual ramekins as suggested in the accompanying illustration.

Cheese Fondue.

5 eggs
1¼ cups milk
1¾ cups soft bread crumbs
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ pound American cheese, grated

Beat egg yolks, add milk, crumbs, seasonings and grated cheese. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into buttered individual casseroles, place them in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven, 325 degrees F., until firm. Garnish with a sprig of parsley and serve with spiced peaches.

Now go back to the casserole style of service again and try this delectable all-in-one-dish meal made of noodles, golden American cheese and thick tomato slices.

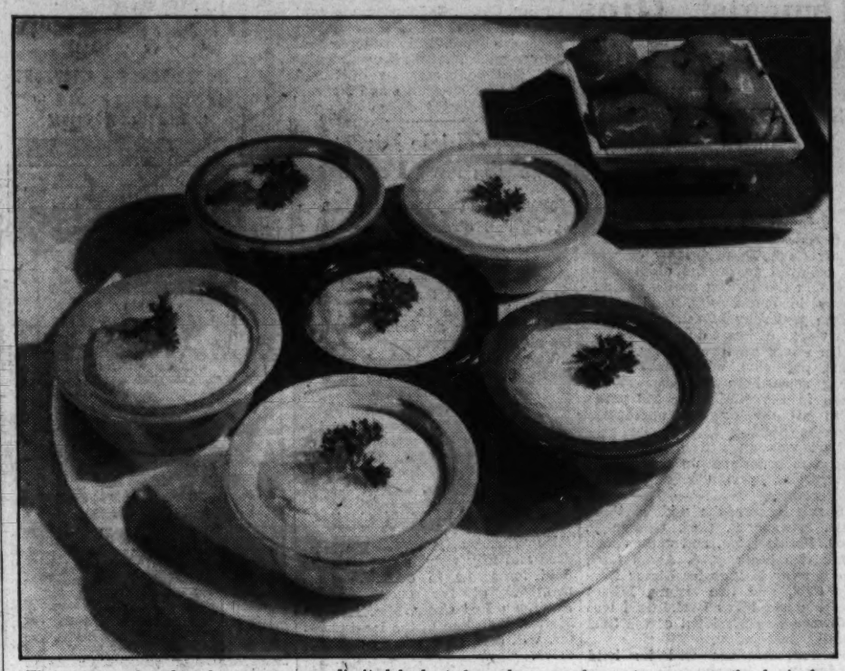
Noodle and Cheese Casserole.

Fill a greased casserole with alternate layers of cooked noodles (3 cups in all) and one-half pound of grated American cheese. Add layers of thickly sliced tomatoes. Top with strips of bacon. Bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees F. about one-half hour.

Hanging Pictures.

A good painting should never be hung close to other pictures. Wall space should be given to it in order to enjoy its full beauty. The eye is very inclusive and should not be distracted by small and inconsequential pictures when there is something artistic to admire.

New Cheese Dishes and Unusual Popover Combinations Add Interest to Fall Menus



The woman who plans her menus on a limited budget depends upon cheese to serve as the basis for many intriguing main dishes for luncheon and dinner. The accompanying story gives recipes for several delicious cheese dishes including the appetite-whetting cheese fondue pictured above.

The popover has been discovered all over again. This crisp shell of golden goodness is no longer relegated to the breakfast table, but can be served in numerous capacities in combination with other foods in the form of dessert or as the piece de resistance.

Popovers Make A Good Dessert Or Meat Course

Filled With Fresh Berries, They Are Substituted For Cream Puffs.

By Dorothea Duncan.

POPOVERS, the crispest, most delicate of the breakfast hot breads have been rediscovered, and this time in the capacity of an excellent background for desserts and the piece de resistance for luncheon or dinner menus.

Instead of making cream puffs, for example, you can bake popovers, tip their tops back, and then fill them with fresh berries or other fruit in season that has been mixed with whipped cream. These with coffee make a delicious luncheon or dinner dessert.

As a main dish, popovers filled with creamed meats are an ideal substitute for a richer and more difficult to make patty shell.

Should Be Crisp and Light.

No matter what position a popover occupies in a menu, it should be crisp, light and golden brown. Popovers require longer baking than most quick breads. They should be baked in a hot oven until they reach their full height, then the temperature must be lowered so that during the remainder of the baking the popover will become light and crisp without burning.

The popover mixture is the thinnest of all quick bread batters and for this reason will not hold air very long. The batter should be beaten vigorously for a few minutes with a rotary egg beater (3 to 3½ minutes) in order to introduce as much air as possible into the batter and to break the liquid present into tiny droplets.

Preheat Before Pouring.

Tin, glass, aluminum, earthenware, iron or steel baking containers may be used for baking popovers. It is essential, however, no matter what type of container you use, to preheat it before pouring in the popover batter. You want the batter to begin baking as soon as it touches the pan, otherwise some of the air, so important to the desired light texture of the baked product, will escape before the baking begins.

The following recipe for popovers, if carefully followed, including as well the details of preheating and greasing the pans and caution as to the correct oven temperature, will produce a delicate, light popover with a golden brown crispness and a delicious flavor.

Popovers.

1¼ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 teaspoon sugar
1 cup milk

Mix the flour, salt and sugar. Gradually add the milk and the well-beaten eggs. Beat thoroughly. Have ready some small ramekins or muffin pans, well greased and piping hot. When using the glass heat-resistant custard cups illustrated be sure to preheat them. Fill them about half full of batter and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. Lower to 350 degrees F. (a moderate oven), and bake 15 to 24 minutes more. This recipe makes 12 popovers.

1 teaspoon lemon juice

Soak clams and bread crumbs in clam liquor and milk while preparing other ingredients. Beat egg yolks well and add to clam mixture with the melted butter, salt, pepper, onion juice, parsley and lemon juice. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a buttered loaf pan which has been lined with paper and steam bake (setting pan containing souffle in another pan filled with hot water) for 35 minutes in a moderate (350 degrees Fahrenheit) oven. Turn out onto platter and serve hot with mushroom sauce.

Mushroom Sauce.

½ pound fresh or 1 small can (2-3 cup) mushrooms
¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk
Salt and pepper

Wash fresh mushrooms, remove stems and peel. Cut stems and caps in pieces. If canned mushrooms are used, drain well and slice thin. Cook gently in butter for 20 minutes. Blend in flour and stir in milk. Cook over hot water in double boiler until it thickens, then season. Will serve six.

2 cups hot milk
1 cup yellow cornmeal
2 teaspoons salt
1½ cups chopped Virginia peanuts
1 cup grated cheese
1-3 cup cooking oil.

Add chopped nuts and grated cheese. Pour into an oblong bread pan which has been well greased. Allow the scrapple to cool. Cut in slices when cold and firm. Dip in flour. Heat cooking oil in frying pan. Fry slices until golden brown on both sides. Add more cooking oil when needed. Serves 6 persons.

Fried Oyster Plant Cakes.

Scrape thoroughly the roots of two bunches of oyster plant, commonly called salsify. Put in saucepan and add just enough water to cover. Boil slowly until tender. Remove from fire and mash. Season to taste with salt, pepper and butter. Mix and shape into cakes. Dip cakes in egg batter and fry in hot, deep fat. If seasoned properly this dish has the same flavor as oysters. Makes 4 servings.

Recipes Using Coffee Flavoring Asked in Post Contest This Week

The universal popularity of coffee as a flavoring as well as a beverage determined this week's Post recipe contest theme.

Cakes, pies, frostings, puddings, and frozen desserts often depend upon coffee for their distinctive flavor. This week The Post's recipe contest will be devoted exclusively to recipes that depend upon coffee for their exceptional flavor.

The above mentioned coffee-flavored dishes are merely suggestions. Any dish that uses coffee as a flavoring is eligible to enter the contest this week.

Five prizes of $1 each will be awarded again this week. If your recipe is a winner this week it will be submitted with other winners in the final judging for the three grand prizes. The final awards, a hand-carved wooden salad bowl with matching wooden serving fork and spoon, a combination cake server smartly styled of nontarnishing chromium and white porcelain decorated with dashing red handles and knob, and a Dutch oven have been selected for their attractiveness as well as their usefulness in the preparing and serving of food.

Send your recipe to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post and be sure that it is mailed in time to reach this office by Saturday morning.

'Tired Feeling' Really Hunger, Study Reveals

Factory Worker's Efficiency Governed by Frequency of Meals, Report Says.

THE lament, "I am too tired to eat," is frequently voiced by some high strung individual who claims he cannot digest a meal at the close of a long, hard day.

Such end-of-the-day exhaustion is due to hunger rather than to actual physical or mental fatigue, according to recent investigations conducted at Yale University. Study of a group of factory workers shows that their efficiency is governed by the frequency of their meals rather than by the amount of energy they expend in their work. Doctors conducting this investigation recommend the eating of frequent, light meals with a goodly amount of "regulating" foods such as fruits, vegetables and milk, rather than the too concentrated diet of bread, pastry and coffee. The recommended diet will relieve the digestive organs of undue strain and the body is kept in an evenly continued state of nourishment which averts the distressing periods of let-down.

Candy Flavored Desserts Have Superior Taste

Cinnamon Frost Is Year-Round Dish; Favorite With Children.

CANDY FLAVORED desserts give a distinctive new taste thrill to the menu. Pineapple-peppermint cream depends upon broken peppermint stick candy for its cool refreshing taste. To make this dessert, soak one tablespoon of cold water and place mixture over hot water until the gelatin is dissolved. Next blend it with one-half cup of sugar, one and one-half cups of grated canned pineapple and two tablespoons of lemon juice. Cool and when partly firmed whip to a froth and fold in one cup of cream beaten stiff and one-half cup of broken peppermint candy. Pour into a mold and chill several hours.

Cinnamon Candy Frost.

Cinnamon candy frost is an acceptable year-round dessert and is especially popular with children. Drop one-half cup of red cinnamon candies into one-half cup of hot water, add a speck of salt and heat over a low flame until dissolved. Pour three tablespoons of cold water into a bowl, sprinkle over water one teaspoon of gelatin, add the softened candy and stir until all ingredients are mixed and dissolved. Next add one-half cup of milk. Cool until slightly thickened and then beat until frothy. Fold in one cup of whipped cream and freeze without stirring.

The most easily prepared refrigerator cake yet to be discovered, attributes its distinctive flavor to a sprinkling of grated Jordan almonds. For the filling put together one cup of whipped cream blended with one cup of grated Jordan almonds. Chill, spread on graham crackers, top with another cracker and repeat process, topping with a third cracker. Garnish with whipped cream with a bit of grated Jordan almonds sprinkled over the top of the cream. Each triple graham cracker sandwich makes an individual serving. Chill before serving for several hours in the refrigerator.

Gilbert Miller Will Present Helen Hayes in New Play at National on Dec. 16

The Legitimate Season Excels Last in Merit

'Dream' Sets New Records; Marx Brothers at Best; Amusement Chat.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

For the week before Christmas, beginning Monday, December 16, Gilbert Miller will present Washington's own Helen Hayes on the stage of the National Theater in a new play bearing the title of "Victoria Regina."

Owing to the demands of a radio contract requiring her presence in New York, Miss Hayes will be prevented from appearing on Tuesday night and there will, accordingly, be no performance on that evening, according to word received yesterday from Mr. Miller and his amiable stentor, Mr. Harry Essex. It is intimated, but not definitely announced, that an extra matinee may be presented to make up for the lost evening performance.

This engagement will be eagerly awaited by Miss Hayes' Washington public for many reasons. Not the least among them is the memory of her distinguished performance on the same stage upon the premier of "Mary of Scotland," the Maxwell Anderson drama, produced under the auspices of the Drama Guild, in which she scored so brilliant a success.

Producers Slow to Learn.

While many of the traditional theater's first-line producers are becoming more and more cognizant of the manifold advantages of opening their new plays in the National Capital, there still is a conspicuous failure on their part to apprehend quite the full box-office potentialities of this city as a proving ground for their "first times on any stage."

For dramatic and musical attractions of the better class, Washington is distinctly a two-week town.

There can be no question, in view of the overflow weeks which they enjoyed last season, that such offerings as "Roberta," "Dodsworth" and the D'Oyly Carte Company's revivals of the Savoyard operas, to name only those that leap immediately to mind, could have doubled their stays here with profitable results for all concerned.

It is quite as palpable that Katharine Cornell might better have played two weeks here and one in Philadelphia than to have exactly reversed that allotment of booking time. The Washington week approximately doubled either of the two in Philadelphia. From the advance mail order sale for "The Great Waltz," due at the National next week, it is already apparent that that mammoth operetta should have been booked here for at least double the duration of its single week.

Is Best Show in Town.

The present outlook is that "The Great Waltz" will precipitate much the same condition that existed during Miss Cornell's recent appearance here in "Romeo and Juliet," when more than $7,000 was refunded to mail-order applicants for seats after the week's supply had been completely sold out.

The National Capital during the past five years has demonstrated itself to be the foremost "showtown" in America, outside of New York. It has enjoyed longer seasons than any other city anywhere near its size and has been favored with the most distinguished touring attractions to be had.

This season is compiling a record that promises to excel last season's by a considerable margin both in consecutive bookings and quality of offerings.

It is about time the producers began to recognize the pre-eminence of Washington as the logical show window for their wares and an extended run center for their proved attractions.

Reverting to the advance sale of seats for Max Gordon's production of "The Great Waltz," due at the National next Monday night, Nov. 11, Manager Cochran finds it necessary, for the second time in the span of scarcely more than a month, to caution the public that mail orders already have exhausted the week's supply of seats scaled to sell at $1 and $1.50.

This means that the "top of the house" already is sold out and those contemplating future mail orders will have available only seats priced from $2 up. It is even confided by the management that only a few of the $2 locations remain to be sold, thus leaving practically nothing but the orchestra floor to be accounted for during the single week of the operetta's run.

It is situations of this sort that make it clearly evident that for the better things of the theater Washington is indisputably a two-week stand. The sooner the producers find it out the better. (New York papers please copy!)

On Your Marx!

By one of those shrewdly maneuvered coincidences that the exploitation departments of our major motion picture production companies know so well how to contrive, one of last night's guest artists on the cherubic Mr. Alexander Woollcott's Sabbath evening cereal over the radio was the button-eyed and fright-wigged Mr. Harpo Marx, whose artistry on the celestial instrument is as unorthodox as Senator Norris' Republicanism.

The mute Marx, it seems, plays the golden-tone source of his picturesque nomenclature off the wrong shoulder, or something.

However, in introducing Harpo to the loudspeaker audience, the Town Crier paid high tribute to the hilarious quality of the latest cinematographic outlet for the Marxian lunacies, a convulsing item by the title of "A Night at the Opera." This, Mr. Woollcott let it be known, he looks upon as far and away the best thing the Marx boys have done for the cinema, either silent or articulate.

Mr. Woollcott is wholly correct. "A Night at the Opera" is a masterpiece of mad and maudlin fun; a riot of the ridiculous; a landslide of the ludicrous. Barring possibly Harold Lloyd's memorable "Safety Last," which was productive more of frightened hysteria than of mirthful laughter, "A Night at the Opera" pops more audience buttons and rips more uproarious seams than any picture that has come along in years—not excepting Chaplin's "City Lights."

Eyewitness Testimony.

I predicate this modest appraisal upon eyewitness knowledge made possible by the critical junket to Baltimore last Saturday afternoon under the solicitous auspices of Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc.; Lou Brown, head man of the Loew advertising and publicity department in Washington, and Billy Saxton, Baltimore city manager for the identical interests.

From the vantage point of the mezzanine loge in the Century Theater, Baltimore, the Washington drama desks viewed the crescendo of action that is "A Night at the Opera" until, one by one, they succumbed to its magnificent absurdities and found themselves wallowing in the aisles in paroxysms of uncontrollable laughter, in company with practically all of Baltimore!

It was bruited about while this comedy was in the course of production that its stars and their sponsors were taking no chances with the material they were permitting to be incorporated in the story of operatic impresarios scouring the studios and opera houses of Italy for great voices and then wrecking the Metropolitan Opera House in this country to "put them over."

Quietly and without shouting, tumult or fanfare, the Marx Brothers—the three of them still actively practicing their profession, that is—slipped unobstrusively out of Hollywood as each comedy sequence was finished in script and "tried it on the dog" in some remote and unsuspecting community to see whether or not an audience would laugh. If it did, the "bit" went into the picture; if not, it went into the ashcan. The evidence is all on the side of the rumor's authenticity.

Great Comedy Construction.

I doubt if there has ever been so skillful and so sustained an example of comedy construction as is revealed in "A Night at the Opera." At least four times during the development of this full-length feature, humorous climaxes of imposing proportions are reached. Each is preceded by a logical "build-up" that in itself compounds more than the average comedy's allotment of laughs.

There are, to be sure, only three of the Marx Brothers left to carry on, Zeppo and Gummo having deserted the rostrum for the calmer pursuits of big business, but they are adequate to any of the normal demands of lunacy. Groucho still is key man of the team; Chico, the piano-playing Italian, and Harpo, the wordless pantomimist with the blonde complex and superb musicianship as a harpist. Individually and collectively, they surpass their every previous high mark in the unbridled hilarity with which they interpret the robustious incidents of the script prepared for them by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, two Broadway practitioners who know their way around and never miss their Marx!

While negotiations have not been definitely completed, it is the hope of the local Loew officials that this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer smash may be booked into one of their F street houses before the current month has been torn off your calendar pad—maybe for Thanksgiving week, which would be the ideal spot for it.

When ever it comes, this is a must for the must list.

Following the screening of the picture, which was given a simultaneous world premiere in Baltimore and St. Louis on Halloweenight, the Washington scribes, and a few Pharisees, were sumptuously dined and wined in one of the small banquet halls of the Lord Baltimore Hotel, by the Messrs. Barron, Brown and Saxton, assisted by that incorrigible publicist, Master Norman Pyle, who had much to do with plastering Baltimore with a consciousness of Marx Brothers' imminence before the picture ever opened. This repast was one of those perfectly appointed feasts for which Mr. Barron and his associates have become celebrated since the famous "Dinner at Eight" and "Barretts of Wimpole Street" banquets spread in commemoration of M-G-M's earlier proficiency with both camera and microphone, a command that has been strengthened with the passing of the months—or is it Years?

History in Making.

From a two-page wire from Zone Manager John J. Payette of the Warner Brothers forces one becomes apprised that "A Midsummer Night's Dream" smashed more than one record during its first week at the National Theater as a "road show" attraction.

The engagement is notable first for having played to a greater box-office gross than any "two-a-day" picture since David Wark Griffith's "A Birth of a Nation," 20 years ago. Second in importance is the fact that this film established beyond question that, in Washington, at least, Shakespeare is a box-office magnet, whose name alone may be relied upon to pack picture theaters as well as playhouses dedicated primarily to exploitation of the living drama.

It has been a noticeable feature of this engagement that each successive projection of the picture, both matinees and nights, has played to greater business than the one immediately preceding. On Saturday afternoon and night the National was completely sold out, even to the gallery boxes.

The advance sale for the second and last week, beginning yesterday, continues large, insuring a fortnight's run that bids fair to hold all film records at the National for years to come.

It would be interesting to know why, after having chronicled it as an RKO-Radio production in the first agate line preceding the review, I should have given "The Three Musketeers," current on the screen at RKO-Keith's, to Universal in the last paragraph in Saturday morning's issue of The Post.

To have done my aberration a complete and total justice, I presume I should have referred to "Musketeers" as an RKO-Radio production for Universal, made by United Artists for release through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, or something of the sort!

Anyhow, to set the record straight, "The Three Musketeers" is an RKO-Radio picture in which Universal had no finger whatsoever. Genuflections all around Eternal Unities Note.

Today and tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., the drama desks are keeping a private "Rendezvous" on the "Barbary Coast," in the Fox Film Exchange's miniature theater.

The logic of the situation practically demands that "Anything Goes" be screened next!

"A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM." The Warner Brothers present Max Reinhardt's picturization of the Shakespeare fantasy, adapted to the screen by Charles Kenyon and Mary McCall, jr., with Ian Hunter, Grant Mitchell, Dick Powell, Ross Alexander, Hobart Cavanaugh, Frank McHugh, Dewey Robinson, James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Hugh Hunter, Otis Harlan, Arthur Treacher, Verree Teasdale, Olivia de Haviland, Jean Muir, Victor Jory, Anita Louise, and Mickey Rooney. Music by Felix Mendelssohn, arranged by Erich Wolfgang Korngold; ballets staged by Bronislawa Nijinska. Costumes designed by Max Ree; photography by Hal Mohr, with special effects by Fred Jackman, Byron Haskin and H. F. Koenekamp. Directed by Max Reinhardt and William Dieterle. At the National Theater. Reviewed Sunday night (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Presenting William Shakespeare's fantasy with a magnificence and on a scale quite beyond the possibilities of the speaking stage, carrying the while something of the true spirit of the bard's gossamer loveliness in lines, scene and action, Max Reinhardt has, in his production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," achieved a new quality of cinematographic excellence.

The production itself and the public response with which it has been greeted—a patronage which has been constantly increasing, performance after performance—is eloquent testimony to the screen's preeminent venture in making available a Shakespeare play to the public and at the same time giving it a treatment which, though perhaps imagined by the playwright, has heretofore been beyond the scope of stage production.

Of the cast, including nearly all of the personnel of Warner Brothers Pictures, high praise must be given. While some particular performer may be something less than inspired, the ensemble effect is one of unusual merit. Of the lines of the drama, they are Shakespeare's; and while some of the lilting pentameters may be missing, again the general effect is one of charm. Of the ballets, never before has the world of fairies been so fascinatingly represented.

Of the technical staff, Dr. Reinhardt and his associates, words cannot be found to express too vigorously the success of their work. Not only in actual performance, but in the development and maintenance of the spirit of the fantasy, have those responsible for music, sound, photography and other technical accouterments, given of their high talents.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream"—a truly remarkable experience in the theater—in years to come must take its deserved place as one of the greatest dramatic innovations of its era.

Gayety

"WINE, WOMEN AND SONG." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 27 scenes, featuring Buddy Abbott, with Harry LeVan, Murray Lewis, Charles Robinson, Sam Gould, Rogers & Rogers, Betty Abbott, Ann Valentine, Cynthia Michel, Ruth Coburn, Rose Heatherly, Annette and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Buddy Abbott. Dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Into this somewhat routine burlesque attraction comes Buddy Abbott as one of several outstanding features. Always a smooth performer, sartorially perfect in garb, Mr. Abbott is one of the wheel's top straight men, whose strict straightness serves as a perfect "build-up" for the comedians. So it is this week, with Charles Robinson and Harry LeVan the beneficiaries of his performance. In point of fact, the well-known rehearsal scene, whose lines are familiar to all who have seen two or more burlesque performances, is executed with the verve of a new skit.

Messrs. Robinson and LeVan are, by themselves, accomplished comedians, the former appearing to particular advantage in the "Old and New Songs" finale to the first act; the latter in the "Matrimonial Agency" sketch. Murray Lewis is the alternate straight man and Sam Gould the tenor of lusty voice.

Tops among the week is blonde Annette, followed not too distantly by Ann Valentine and Cynthia "Shrine Week" Michel, brunette charmers—all three display artistes of curvaceous charm.

Dancers Score.

In two all-too-short routines is prima ballerina Rose Heatherly, as accomplished a little danseuse as has come through in any season.

George and "Jerry" Rogers, individually and jointly, perform the more prominently programmed dance routines. Worthy of especial mention for their individual specialties, the team of Rogers & Rogers is easily the hottest tap duo since Wade & Wade.

Ruth Coburn is a sweet-singing canary, whose voice seems a trifle delicate, though of unusual quality, for the duties imposed by the present assignment. Betty Abbott fills in creditably as the coubrette.

The Dancing Bryanettes, most of whom appear to be on extreme diets, perform their routines smoothly.

Motor Vehicle Directcor Weighs New Proposals

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—John Q. Rhodes, director of the motor vehicle division, said today he is considering suggestions that a five-year operator's license period may be too long and that arrangements should be made to require every driver to have an examination of his ability to drive.

The 8th WOMAN GETS MORE OUT OF LIFE

Eight million women have had to always consider the time of month in making an engagement — avoiding any strenuous activities on certain days.

Today, a million escape this regular martyrdom because they have accepted the aid of Midol. A tiny tablet, white and tasteless, is the secret of the eighth woman's poise and comfort at this time.

Are you a martyr to regular pain? Must you favor yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol might change all this. Might have you your confident self, leading your regular life, free from periodic pain and discomfort.

The smallest degree of relief you might get from Midol means a great deal to your comfort.

Midol is taken any time, preferably just before the expected pain. This precaution often avoids the pain altogether. Yet, Midol is not a narcotic.

Get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case — they are usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, a card addressed to Midol, 170 Varick St., New York, brings a trial box in plain wrapper.

V. F. W. Post Celebrates Its Tenth Anniversary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 4.—The tenth anniversary of the organization of Henry Post, No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, was celebrated here tonight with a dinner at the Queen City Hotel. Forced Off Silver.

The Chinese Government has finally abandoned its struggle to retain the silver standard and has announced its intention of nationalizing silver stocks and establishing a managed currency, in the hope that this may be stabilized at existing exchange rates. Even in a country like Great Britain, with a highly developed credit and currency system and a strong central government, the course of currency management has not always run smoothly. It will unquestionably meet with formidable obstacles in economically backward China, where a feeble central Government maintains only nominal control over large parts of the country.

However, the Chinese are no longer in a position to choose the kind of currency system that suits their needs. In spite of their export bans, the price-boosting policies of the United States Treasury have resulted in a prolonged drain upon Chinese silver stocks. Smuggling has been carried on extensively by speculators in search of profits from the sale of silver. And lately the outward movement has been augmented by a flight of capital in anticipation of some such action as has been taken. The domestic disorders resulting from the overvaluation of silver are summed up succinctly by the Chinese Finance Minister, who says: "There have been severe internal deflation, growing unemployment, widespread bankruptcies, a flight of capital abroad, a fall in government revenues and an adverse balance of payments."

Responsibility for China's abandonment of the silver standard must to a large extent be laid at the door of our silver-bloc Senators, who once brazenly asserted that a rise in silver prices would increase that country's purchasing power as well as assisting the rehabilitation of silver as a money metal. It is to be hoped that some of these Senators will have the grace to blush when they observe the results of their attempts to aid China, and restore the prestige of silver. President Roosevelt, also, will probably now for a time refrain from calling our foreign policy that of "a good neighbor."

Our silver-purchase policy has merely succeeded in adding the sole remaining silver standard country of importance to the list of those with fluctuating exchanges and with currency systems that offer a constant temptation to inflation. We may also find that we have played into the hands of those Japanese who for political as well as economic reasons desire to link the Chinese dollar to the yen. May the responsibility be properly assessed when the time comes for complaint of still further declines in our trade with China.

Next Year's Cars.

The new automobiles are out, a fact of no small interest in a country where 11,000,000 pleasure cars carry a great majority of the population hundreds of billions of miles a year. The annual display comes nearly three months earlier than usual. The decision of the industry to introduce its 1936 models in November being part of a stabilization program in production operations. As planned, the new schedule will make available more regular employment throughout the year, not only for workers in automobile plants but in the mines, mills and shops where raw materials and parts are produced for the industry.

Heretofore, seasonal variations in the public's purchasing habits have exercised a determining influence upon the operations of automobile plants. With factory production geared to a retail demand normally reaching a peak in the late spring, and subsiding to a low point in the fall, employment throughout the industry has ordinarily risen and fallen proportionately. Advance in the date of the showings is designed to equalize more nearly the work schedules. And inasmuch as the shift in dates was accomplished only after considerable disruption of production routines and necessitated securing the approval of many rival producers, it may be fairly said that at least one industry has shown itself capable of co-operative planning for national welfare.

Through the welter of superlatives that make up the advertisements announcing the new models there runs a recurrent strain: safety, economy, performance. The sequence is significant. Unlike other years, safety is now a prime selling point for salesmen. No more is a car extolled for its ability to make 90 miles an hour. Speed and power the new cars certainly have, but more to be emphasized are the many attributes which make these beautiful machines as fool-proof as possible. Here again, although cynics will suggest that good business alone may explain this growing concern for the public weal, it would be unfair not to give the industry credit. For whatever the motives, it is the genius and energy of American engineering enterprise that has made the automobile of 1936 less costly, less dangerous, more efficient and a more dependable servant for the country as a whole.

Optimist Of Necessity.

In an election appeal to New York voters, Postmaster General Farley asserted that "the newspapers, which in their editorial pages are making severe, unfair and insidious attacks on this Administration, in their financial pages tell the true story." Thereupon, he noted with pride that the New York Times weekly business index has reached the high level of 91.2 per cent of an assumed normal, as contrasted with an index of 62 per cent when the Roosevelt Administration came into power. To Mr. Farley, these figures not only unfold a tale of unshadowed economic progress, but also enable the Democrats to claim credit for all the improvement that has occurred since the spring of 1933.

Any fair or informed observer would quickly agree that there has been a marked upturn in business in recent months, and that the immediate outlook is cheering. It is sheer political charlatanism, however, to assert that the recovery is due solely to replacement of a Republican regime "of ruination, selfishness and disaster" by an administration "of economic progress." How would Mr. Farley account for the world-wide extent of the economic collapse that spread ruin through countries having few contacts with the United States? What reasons would he give for the subsequent world-wide recovery that has enabled nations ignorant of New Deal policies to forge ahead of us in the race toward recovery?

To persons not blinded by partisanship the explanation of an almost universal economic upturn will be found in general economic causes, not in political panaceas applied to a particular part of the earth's area. In previous depressions the United States has worked its way back to prosperity by giving the economic system time and opportunity to correct maladjustments and provide the basis for a fresh start. There is no reason to suppose that natural recovery forces have suddenly become impotent, although they may well have been weakened by governmental interference.

The chief danger in the Farley type of argument, however, lies not so much in its extravagant claims as in its deliberate effort to divert public attention from the danger signs that mark the road along which we are traveling. Business indices show the progress of recovery in a very imperfect fashion. They do not indicate whether a business pick-up is based upon a firm foundation, or jeopardized by policies that may tend eventually to undermine the structure.. It is worth noting, for instance, that both Germany and Italy have experienced an extraordinarily rapid rise in industrial activity during the past year or more. Yet to the economist who appreciates the fundamental economic and financial weakness of these countries, an upturn due largely to heavy military expenditures is properly regarded as artificial and ephemeral.

To the extent (admittedly known) to which our rising trade and production indices have been pushed upward by lavish Government spending, our recaptured prosperity also rests upon a very unstable support. But even assuming that business recovery would have been substantial without this artificial stimulus it is impossible to agree with Mr. Farley that "complete prosperity is nearly here" so long as over 9,000,000 people are estimated to be unemployed.

It would be most unfair to minimize the extent of the substantial gains that have been made, or to overrate the tremendous difficulty of returning to genuine and relatively lasting prosperity. On the other hand, it would be ruinous to the American people to be deluded into thinking that the current financial pages of the newspapers tell the whole story. They do not even present a fair picture of recovery progress unless they note the Administration's inability to grapple constructively with the unemployment problem, and its failure to reform fiscal policies that are piling up vast debts and crushing taxes for the business of the future.

Anti-Climax.

There has always been something a little sad about the farewell tour of an aging and beloved entertainer. But it seems even more regrettable when the retired artist decides to appear again before the public in what is inevitably an anti-climax. Something of this feeling is aroused by a dispatch in the New York Herald Tribune suggesting that the Mauretania is to see active service again. Alas, not as a majestic liner proudly riding the waves, but with her fittings used as the decor of a swanky Manhattan hotel!

For almost a quarter of a century, this sister ship to the Lusitania flew the Blue Ribbon speed pennant of the North Atlantic. And when launched in 1907, she was the world's "biggest, longest, fastest" liner. Her distinguished maritime career was marked not only by seaworthiness but also by heroic rescues of other ships and an honorable war service during which she transported thousands of American doughboys to France. Last July she was relegated to a maritime graveyard at Rosyth, Scotland, and left to ponder with her junked contemporaries on the foamy grandeur of another day.

As well as being deplorable, there is something a bit macabre in this idea of permanently anchoring the trappings of a great old ship to such landlubberish foundations. It's like pulling the teeth of a lion and displaying him in a theater lobby. A ship that has braved hurricanes, icebergs, fire and submarines will doubtless be inclined to agree with Dr. Otternschlag, of "Grand Hotel," who with complete lack of foresight remarked that, in a hotel, "nothing ever happens."

A Terrifying Lucidity.

Proverbial as is the constrast between the artist's struggle for bread and the posthumous value that society places upon his work, there are times when the irony strikes home with the sharpness of a newly discovered truth. Forty-five years after the death of Vincent van Gogh in penury, a collection of his paintings and drawings, estimated to have a marketable worth of one million dollars, opens to the public today in the Museum of Modern Art in New York, preparatory to a tour of the major American art galleries. And these loaned pieces are only one-seventh of his entire output.

The world's belated justice to a genius is not yet complete in van Gogh's case. There remains the removal of the stigma which has branded him as "the mad Dutch artist." Mad he may have seemed to his contemporaries, who understood neither the intensity of his temperament nor his selfless devotion first to humanity and then to the ideal of artistic verity. Modern psychiatrists, knowing his clinical history, would pronounce him not insane, but the victim of nervous crises of an epileptoid nature, the result of the privations he had endured.

To comprehend this artist's character one must take into consideration both his heritage and his environment, the forces which made him a zealot. The son of a Calvinist pastor, he was raised in a religious atmosphere, from which he was removed at 16, when he became a salesman in art galleries. Revolting against the popular artifices which are always mingled with art, he turned back to religion, studied theology for a time, and secured an appointment as lay evangelist among the coal miners of the Borinage.

Whole-souled in everything, he taught by example what he preached in precept, sharing the destitution and misery of the folk among whom he lived, depriving himself of necessities to relieve others. His detestation of social injustice, his contempt for hypocrisy, and his literal interpretation of "love thy neighbor as thyself" brought about the loss of his mission. Repulsed in this direction, he turned his fiery spirit to the service of art.

During the ten years that van Gogh painted, his impracticality and absorption were such that he had to depend for his livelihood upon the generosity of his brother Theo, the one person who had faith in his genius. Without Theo's unfailing aid, the canvasses which the world treasures today would not be in existence. Vincent burned himself out with his own creative fire.

As he lay dying from a self-inflicted wound at the age of 37, he said: "There is something in me which simply makes it impossible for me to accept my lot as it is; I am cursed with preposterous discontent." From posterity's point of view, it was a divine discontent, a spiritual impulse that would not let him rest. Erratic as he was, and devoid of calm reasonableness, he was not insane. On the contrary, he saw life with a terrifying lucidity.

Kingdom Of The Hellenes.

In Greece, long a land of surprises, the expected has at last occurred. The people have declared for a return from nominal republicanism to a constitutional monarchy, with the once evicted George II on its throne. The vote was heavy, and the winning party declares that 97 per cent of the ballots were cast for recall of the king. Even Crete, the native isle of exiled anti-monarchist Venizelos, kept to this ratio. No complaints of compulsion, still less of disorders, have been reported. There is every evidence that the people are practically unanimous in their desire and will now get the form of government they really want.

In that form of government, the personality of the monarch is perhaps of minor importance; yet George, during his "travels," has borne himself with a restraint and dignity which promises well for his return to the office he lost eleven years ago. Of late, Greece has been faced with a dangerous dilemma. The republic had proved a failure; there came a crisis when choice appeared to lie only between anarchy or dictatorship.

Fortunately, Gen. Kondylis has demonstrated himself as a man able to check the former peril without assuming the powers of the latter. His regency holds promise of ushering in a popular government which should prove a stabilizing influence for the entire Balkan peninsula.

Surgeons were greatly surprised to find a bolt, nut and washer in the brain of a Michigan man. It must have been their first experience in opening up a politician's head.

Appearances are deceptive. A number who are putting up a good front have their backs to the wall.

Fattening The Bureaucrats.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

After two years' operation, WPA's housing division has not provided living accommodations for a single family. To effect this lack of achievement, however, has required so many employes that an apartment house has been purchased for offices. The overflow of New Deal workers has already flooded the huge Government offices and several residential houses and practically all suitable office space taken over.

A wondering citizenry may well ask: After all the fattening bureaucrats have been taken care of, what will be left for the taxpayers?

Philippines' Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That the Filipinos are happy and excited over the approaching inauguration of the Philippine Commonwealth is beyond doubt. Perhaps it is because most of the 13,000,000, if not all of them, are eager to be free and independent. They are enthusiastic to see the Philippines, which has an area of 115,000 square miles, with fertile soil and rich natural resources, set adrift and be one among the great nations of the world. They think it is glorious to be released from the strong guiding hands and kindly protection of Uncle Sam. They believe they are capable to keep their key tuned up in the symphony of civilized nations.

As a Filipino who refuses to be maudlin when it comes to liberty, I rejoice with my countrymen over the birth of our constitution, with President Manuel L. Quezon to guide our ship of state. It was the best thing we could get from intellectual politicians in the United States Congress. Its certification by President Roosevelt was perhaps our nearest approach to seeing the realization of our freedom, although we may gain our independence in the course of events. At any rate it is advantageous for us Filipinos to have a constitution we feel proud of, especially as it was motivated by the spirit of American democracy

Viewing the future of the Philippines and mindful of the smooth, rapid educational advantages of my countrymen under American sovereignty, I believe it much more vital for us Filipinos to concentrate our minds and activities for the promotion of a better trade with the American people, the cultivation of a more lasting friendship with them, greater study and adherence to the principles of democracy as embodied in their great Constitution, instead of worrying over an independence which when our precious Philippines is set loose in the surging sea of jumbled politics, will only mean our economic jeopardy and make us feel the threat of being a prey to any monstrous, covetous and powerful nation which knows our great commercial advantages and strategic importance in the Orient.

After all, we Filipinos should be awakened to the fact that it is neither celebration nor the dream of unreliable independence which makes a great nation, but it is unity, industry, right education, spiritual brotherhood and economic progress.

Road To Civilization.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: In 1882 I was working on a dairy farm at Morian Station near Chautauqua, N. Y. It was, among other duties, my job to drive the milk wagon to the cheese factory about three miles distant between Morian Station and Fredonia, and then bring back the whey for the hogs. On one occasion at election time, while waiting for the cheese factory to deliver the whey, I hitched the team, at the direction of the factory, to the rail about the public square of that still beautiful and thriving village.

While I was doing so, Judge Barker, of revered memory, drove up in a victoria drawn by two beautiful chestnut bays. He saluted Lester Stearns, boss of Chautauqua, Cattaragus and Allegheny Counties, and he said, "Lester, what a glorious thing it is to see all these honest-hearted farmers come in to register when their farms so need their attention." And Lester replied, "Judge, honest farmers! There ain't no such animal. I paid every one of them $2 to come in and register."

So it is, that we proceed with the great game of "civilization." And we are becoming more "civilized" every minute.

"Prophet Without Honor."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the heat of political debate during the last campaign, Herbert Hoover told the American people that grass would be growing in the middle of the streets by the following July if Franklin D. Roosevelt were elected to the Presidency in November. Rejecting his prophecy, the American people elected Franklin D. Roosevelt, author of the "New Deal;" and now after three years of his administration, not even sprouts of the crop of grass are visible to the naked eye. The prosperity which he visioned around the elusive corner in 1932, is actually looming in sight under the auspices of the New Deal.

After all of this, one would think that Mr. Hoover would desist from prophecy, from the very shame of it; but no whit abashed, he now comes forth, smarting under the sting of defeat, and tells the American people with bland assurance that approval of the New Deal, instead of "my policies," will lead the Nation to economic and financial ruin. But the Nation now will hardly heed his gloomy predictions. Surely, Mr. Hoover is a prophet without honor in his own country.

Out Of Date?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in a picture where Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston drew up a resolution declaring the Independence of the United States. And they drew it up by candlelight!

That must have been some sort of a "horse-and-buggy" resolution that these "Old-Timers" wished on us. We want an amended one—one that is drawn up by electric lights flooding town and the news photographers on the job. F. V.

Views On Teaching Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Board of Education is to be commended for standing by its guns against the stragetic cross-fire of the red-baiters who oppose the teaching of economic truths in the public schools. All lovers of liberty should be mindful of the price paid for their freedom and should lend encouragement to the wise counsel of E. Barrett Prettyman and help to George Warren in defending the stand of the Board of Education against the "foulness of the crafty plea by which these bold invaders would delude you."

When you understand the motives that animate their minds you will not be long in making your decision against them. These leaders of the red-baiter movement would give you the protection of Fascism. A power that is already looming above the horizon. They offer you the protection of a dictatorship such as we now find in Germany and Italy.

J. F. McNEELY.
Mannington, W. Va., Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In all this furor anent teaching communism in the schools, the teachers' oath, etc., your editorial writers, special writers and correspondents seem to forget that the reasons for the law against teaching communism and for the requirement of the teachers' oath are that many teachers want to teach it—that is, advocate it.

There is no reason why they should not teach about it, at the same time teaching about Fascism, Naziism and any other political doctrine. That is true academic freedom. To teach only one of these or advocate it is not academic freedom—for the student. To be academically free the student must have a chance to make his own selection.

Teaching about these "isms" has no place in the secondary schools. Students of school age are not competent to reach sound conclusions. The function of the secondary schools is to give the students such education as will enable them to support themselves and to go on to higher education, if they so desire. A thorough grounding in the "three R's," American history, practical Christianity, the theory of American Government and the like is more essential than for school children to be instructed in political and economic experiments in other lands. P. O'J.
Washington, Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A wag, writing to The Post, states that they teach even cannibalism in Dr. Ballou's sedition factories. Then, why not communism? So he asks.

Well, cannibalism is not a form of government. It is a mode of life, a perverted appetite, a bad habit like drinking moonshine or using "dope," or pestering Mr. Farley for a job. No doubt, the pupils are taught that there are cannibals and to please, keep away from them. Whether they are also instructed to avoid Communists, that I don't know.

The school prepares for life. And any problem that we may encounter later on, why, it might well be touched on in the classroom. Horace said it all when he wrote "Nihil humanum mihi alienum puto." In the present instance, this means, Sure, tell the kids about it.

FREDERICK VETTER.
Washington, Nov. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It happens that I eat breakfast each morning with 12-year-old Marjorie. Yesterday she came to the table with a worried look. Suddenly her blue eyes came up from a dish of grapefruit and demanded:

"What is communism?"

"Communion-ism," I replied, "is the taking of bread and wine at the altar."

"But I want to know what communism is!"

(After breakfast I saw her make for an encyclopedia.)

The Communists in our midst should render thanks to the Hearst newspapers and other self-styled 100 per cent Americans. For never before has there been such a scramble for knowledge regarding the Kremlin. From now on, so it seems to me, the Communists can sit still and win. PLEBEIAN.

The Post Impressionist

"Ladies And Gentlemen!"

Post Office, Tuesday.

"AND so," said the voice on air, "let's improve our manners by study and imitation of the manners of better times: the elegance of ancient Athens, the cleanliness of the old Roman, the courtesy of the courts of France and England in those days when Society with a big S flourished at its highest and best."

The Post-Impressionist hadn't heard the start of this radio talk, But he wished he had heard it. He believes that we have much to learn from the past. He may feel that of late, manners have degenerated. Yet he does nurse certain doubts as to whether—in sheer elegance, cleanliness and courtesy—the periods referred to were worthy of unreserved imitation.

Of course, a great deal depends upon one's definition of terms. Nevertheless, elegant Athens! The Athens of Pericles had no sewage system. "The cleanliness of old Rome:" Although its patricians ate dinners of 20 courses—elecampane, mallows and sow's udder, peacocks' brains and nightingales' tongues—he evaded the problem of their digestion by the diligent practice of emetics. And although he bathed luxuriously, he bathed only on market days.

Besides, what's all this about the refinement of the courts of France and England "in the brave days of old?"

* * *

When Henry VIII met Francis I at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, ladies and gentlemen were careful to blow their noses with the left hand, in order that their right digits might be "clean" when fishing food from the communal plate. Of Louis XIV his Bavarian sister-in-law has written:

"I have often seen him eat (at one sitting) four plates of different soups, a whole pheasant, a large plate of salad, two good slices of ham, and then be helped more than once to fruit and sweetmeats."

Not that the British court was not, then and later, less refined. Sir James Harrington, for one, has painted a pretty picture of the fete with which, at Whitehall, James I entertained the King of Denmark. There was a devastating dinner followed by a pageant wherein a lady of noble birth, impersonating Haile Selassie's ancestress and Sheba's Queen, "did carry most precious gifts to both their Majesties."

Alas, she too had dined more well than wisely! She "overset her caskets" into the Danish lap and fell at this King's feet. He "then got up and would dance with the Queen of Sheba; but he fell down and humbled himself before her, and was carried to an inner chamber and laid on a bed of state, which was not a little defiled with the presents of the Queen."

If that radio Petronius wants to learn the limitations of his enviable epochs, we commend him to H. C. Chatfield-Taylor's "Charmed Circles," published the other day by Houghton-Mifflin. It is an amazing commentary.

Its author quotes eye-witnesses: He reminds us how de Grammont sketched that model of fashion Mistress Stewart—"it would be hardly possible for a woman to have less wit and more beauty." He recalls how even the Puritans "felt that for a woman education was a waste of time." He cites Bishop Burnet on the confession of the too typical Earl of Rochester that he "had never, during the last five years of his life, been sober."

Mr. Chatfield-Taylor fairly riddles the age we are wont to describe as "Humanizing." Didn't Felding, at least in his lean days, "wipe his hands, after his greasy meals, on the back of a Newfoundland dog?" Didn't the young Samuel Johnson, when invited to dine with more fortunate people, eat so that "his veins swelled and moisture broke out on his forehead?"

Chesterfield's letters to his illegitimate son made their writer the Emily Post of three generations; but they left even unfortunate Stanhope just as Sainte-Beauve described him: "One of those ordinary men of the world of whom it suffices to say that there is nothing to be said." His father's friends, Addison and Pope, spilled soup over their own waistcoats and their host's "fine carpets." And when the Duchess of Hamilton was presented at court, the ladies of fashion thought it no breach of etiquette to "climb upon chairs and tables to look at her."

Did the French Revolution free Frenchmen or replace, in the high places, a set of polished incompetents by a set of incompetents who were rough without being diamonds? Considering the Society of the British regency and George IV, little improved by his immediate successors, the extreme reaction of early Victorian manners becomes more than explicable: it becomes almost laudable.

"Does Society exist?" asked Anatole France in Le Mannequin d'Osier.

After recalling your previous reading, or letting Mr. Chatfield-Taylor recall some of it for you—and add details from his own—you wonder if, except perhaps at Byzantium: Society ever did exist in perfection.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Choosing Up Sides.

Geneva, Nov. 4.

YOUR correspondent had his first view of diplomatic preparations for the next world war Thursday afternoon when representatives of many nations met in the temporary palace of peace to set the date for cracking down on Signor Mussolini with a boycott. This punishment is to be applied in the name of humanity for protection of Ethiopia, a barefoot member of the club, but its effect is to protect the British Empire. It is just as well not to accept at the outset any sentimental notion that world politicians gathered for these deliberations are bothered about the rights or sufferings of the Ethiopians. Such an idea can only cause confusion. It would be just as sensible to believe that delegates at a national party convention in the United States were free and independent patriots with altruistic motives bent on nominating the best man in the country for the office of President. If the present proceedings bear a striking resemblance to the low and utterly shameless bargaining and backroom intrigue by which the people's choice is arrived at, it must be said that the business of the League is carried on without mournful howling, parading, spitting, throwing of papers and trash which always leaves the convention hall in America looking and smelling like a gigantic animal cage. These statesmen, though the equals of the convention delegates and party leaders in every branch of duplicity and ruthlessness, are much braver physically, more sanitary and comparative in appearance to the United States Senate.

• • • •

LIKE our national conventions, the major steps of the League toward the next great international dogfight are attended by a large press delegation, which is furnished with an enormous press room and fast wire facilities for transmission of propaganda to papers, a majority of which are enslaved either by tyrannic dictators or in the case of the French by the incredible venality of many proprietors. The meeting of the co-ordination committee to set the crackdown date was billed for 5 o'clock, but there was no hurry and statesmen and journalists speaking many languages stood in groups in the lobby between the big committee room and the press room for almost an hour conversing, reading papers or drinking at the bar. Unlike American conventiongoers, who couldn't be trusted with a wet bar lest they get drunk and forget who bought them up last, a majority of the bar patrons of the Palace of Peace drank tea, with occasional Scotch and soda or a Negus. The Negus, it may be explained, is a house specialty containing orange and lemon juice and a big slosh of a black French liquor said to be distilled from rotten logs and to have been known to blow a soft hat through a concrete ceiling.

• • • •

ABOUT fifty statesmen, innumerable secretaries and journalists drifted toward the chamber eventually, the statesmen arraying themselves at long tables on the floor, the secretaries in rows of low chairs, back to back, and officials of committees assuming their places on the long dais with Senhor Vasconcellos of Portugal, president of the co-ordination committee, in the center, with an English interpreter at a reading stand just below.

The press ascended a steeply-rising gallery at the rear of the room neatly furnished with pink ashtrays, blotter pads and copy paper. Guests arrayed above and behind the press were admonished by signs in three languages against cheering, making a demonstration or smoking.

The statesmen and the journalists, however, are permitted to smoke, although few did, among them being Hugh Wilson, American observer, who fired up a pipe. He is merely a kibitzer, so to speak, the United States being a nonmember. Mr. Wilson rose and shook hands cordially with a Japanese observer, another outsider, who sat down a few chairs away. The hall is about the size of the Senate chamber in Washington, but resembles the execution chamber at Sing Sing, with white steel girders across the ceiling, which, like the walls, is made of pink plaster board. Twelve round white globes, the size of medicine balls, dangled from the ceiling.

• • • •

AT the left, sitting at a long table, was Capt. Anthony Eden, Britain's man and the perfect figure of a drawing-room Englishman. Tall, handsome, and apparently in his early 40s, with a silky brown mustache which he dabbed with a handkerchief protruding from a breast pocket of his morning coat, Mr. Eden appeared very important. At the same table sat the Aga Khan, Indian potentate and race horse owner, fat, swarthy, glossy, with dark bulbous eyes—a man who is God to many Indians glad to drink his bath water. This god is an absent divinity, preferring the pleasures and palaces of Europe. Business is conducted first in French, then mumbled in rapid English. Everybody rose. It developed Laval wanted reservations on the crackdown and some others, like our conventioneers still in the market for inducements, had not yet approved this mere matter of easily accomplishable business negotiation.

The New Premier Of Canada

Liberal Leader Hopes To Push Trade Pact Here.

By William Marchington.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Ottawa.

THE Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, who, after the overwhelming Liberal victory at the general election held on October 14 has assumed the premiership of Canada for the third time, has not dallied long in forming his cabinet and getting down to the task of tackling a variety of problems left on his doorstep by the Conservative ministry.

One of the foremost of these concerns trade relations with the United States, and Mr. King's first official act, after being sworn in as premier, was to call upon Mr. Norman Armour, the Minister from the United States at Ottawa, and establish friendly contacts with him. He has also revealed the nature of a discussion with Sir Francis Floud, the British high commissioner at Ottawa, in which he explained that owing to the preoccupation of the British government with a general election he had abandoned his original intention of making the revision of the Ottawa agreements the first move in the Liberal policy of freeing Canadian trade from the shackles imposed on it by the Bennett government.

Mr. King and his lieutenants have all along contended that a Canadian Conservative ministry, committed as it was to high protection for local industries, could never hope to negotiate a satisfactory trade agreement with the United States. Its consummation, he submitted, could be asily achieved by a Liberal administration, which would not bargain on any niggling scale, but would seek to make the basis of the pact as broad as possible. Accordingly this week he has had a conference with Mr. Hume Wrong, the Canadian Charge d'Affaires at Washington, and he has given fresh instructions to the Canadian trade and tariff experts, who were working on the negotiations under the Bennett ministry.

Mr. King is anticipating a trip to Washington with them this week and the presumption is that the Roosevelt Administration will be invited to widen the scope of the negotiations. At any rate they will be vigorously pushed from the Canadian end, inasmuch as the avowed objective of the King ministry is to have the agreement concluded within three months.

• • • •

THE political record and background of Mr. King are a guarantee that he will leave no stone unturned in order to conclude a comprehensive trade agreement with the United States. Politics are in his blood. His grandfather was William Lyon Mackenzie, a Scotch journalist and politician who, in 1837, headed an abortive rebellion in upper Canada against the British authorities. Despite its failure, the uprising played some part in securing responsible parliamentary government for Canada. He, himself, is the son of John King, who was a lecturer in the law school at Osgoode Hall, in Toronto, and Isabel, a daughter of the aforesaid W. L. Mackenzie. He was born at the town of Berlin (rechristened Kitchener during the Great War) on December 17, 1874. After receiving his early education at local schools there, he attended Toronto University and was graduated in 1895, receiving a LL. B. in 1896 and M. A. in 1897.

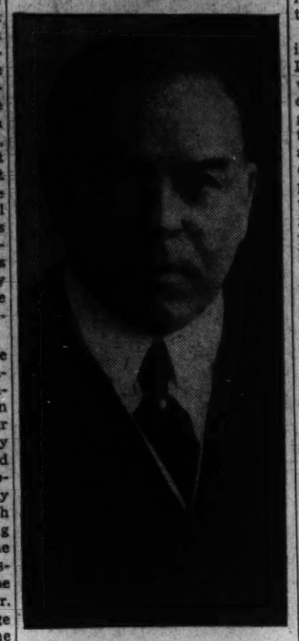
From Toronto University he won a scholarship which took him to Harvard, where he studied several years and became a protege of Dr. Charles Eliot. There he was elected a fellow in political science and awarded a traveling fellowship which enabled him to study economic and social conditions in Britain and other European countries. He also spent some time at Hull House, in Chicago, doing social work under the auspices of Jane Adams and worked for a period as a reporter on the Toronto Globe.

At that time some sort of academic career seemed his destiny, but in 1900 an opportunity presented himself to enter the public service of his native country. In that year the Laurier government at Ottawa established a ministry of labor and Sir William Mulock, now at the age of 93 still functioning as chief justice of Ontario, who was given charge of it, when he looked round for a suitable deputy minister, bethought himself of young Mr. King, who had made for himself, by his writings on social and industrial problems, something of a reputation as an expert.

• • • •

FROM 1900 to 1908 Mr. King worked in Ottawa as deputy minister of labor and editor of the Labor Gazette, and was responsible for building up the efficiency of the new department and for some useful industrial legislation, notably a measure called the industrial disputes investigation act, which was designed to avert strikes.

But a civil service career did not satisfy his ambitions, and in 1908, with the encouragement of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Liberal premier of the day, he resigned from the public service to stand as a Liberal for the North Waterloo division of Ontario, in which he had been born.



To Visit Washington.

At the general election for the Federal Parliament held in that year he was elected, and in the following year he was brought into the Liberal cabinet as minister of labor.

In 1911 came the famous reciprocity election, and it was as a zealous advocate of the Taft-Fielding pact that Mr. King went down to defeat with his party.

Left without a seat in Parliament, he for a time had charge of the Liberay Party's publicity bureau, but in 1914 he accepted an offer from the Rockefeller Foundation to undertake an investigation of industrial relations in the United States, and, although he never gave up his residence in Ottawa, he spent most of the next four years in the United States. Eventually the fruit of his labors and investigations were published in a volume entitled, "Industry and Humanity."

But he was not done with politics. When in 1919 the death of Laurier made it necessary for the Liberal Party to find a new leader, the choice of a National Party convention fell upon Mr. King. A seat in Parliament was found for him and he assumed the leadership of the opposition. For two years he filled this role until the general election of December, 1921, brought the Liberals to power and placed Mr. King in the premiership. Since he did not command a clear majority in the Commons his first ministry had a difficult path, but it survived the general election of 1925 only to fall within a year as the result of a constitutional crisis forced by the action of Lord Byng, the then governor general. However, when a second general election proved necessary in 1926, the Liberals won with comparative ease, and Mr. King was reinstated as premier.

HE HAD now a clear majority in the commons and the great post-war boom was at its height, his ministry in the early part of its career had easy sailing, but when the slump came in 1929 it fell into disfavor and was badly beaten in the general election of 1930. So Mr. King had five more years as leader of the opposition, but he pegged away at the task of educating public opinion about the mistakes and follies of the Conservative ministry and had his reward last month when the voters of Canada gave his party a decisive mandate to form a ministry and put its program in force.

As he begins his third premiership at the age of 60, Mr. King has behind him now many years of varied political and administrative experience. In his hot youth he held what where then regarded as very advanced ideas about social and economic problems and in some quarters was set down as a dangerous radical who entertained wild notions about the rights of labor. But years and experience in practical administration seem to have mellowed these early fervors and, while he has never abandoned his zeal for sane progressive reforms, his temper and outlook have become increasingly conservative as he grows older.

By predilection and training he is, as he has often proclaimed, a Liberal of the Gladstonian school who believes firmly in the systems of democracy and parliamentary government, in the preservation of the liberty of the individual citizen as far as it is compatible with the common weal, in reasonably free play being given to the operation of the laws of supply and demand and in the desirability of the maximum possible amount of trade exchanges between the different nations.

• • • •

HE has an ingrained horror alike of Socialism, Communism or Fascism, regarding them as alien to the spirit of the Anglo-Saxon race and bound to spell doom to the democratic system, whose preservation he holds to be essential for human progress. Mr. Bennett was an autocrat who expected his colleagues and everybody else to take their orders and ideas from himself, but Mr. King is the very reverse; he is by temper a conciliator and adjuster who believes that the successful government of a country like Canada requires the co-operation of a variety of people and he gives his ministers a comparatively free hand, counting himself only the leader of a team. As leader of a party, which contains different racial and religious elements and whose members' views range from extreme radicalism to stubborn conservatism he has had ample opportunity for exercising his talents for conciliation and he has developed remarkable skill in securing compromises between divergent viewpoints.

Labor problems have always been one of his primary interests and he has always been prepared to support governmental intervention for the betterment of industrial conditions but to collectivist enterprises in general and state interference with business he has been consistently cold. He has always kept the Department of External Affairs in his own hands and in the sphere with which its work is concerned his outlook has always been essentially North American.

• • • •

IN his opinion a free flow of trade across the international boundary would enure to the prosperity of both countries and he has always kept reciprocity in the fogefront of the Liberal program. He has consistently supported Canada's membership in the League of Nations, but with certain reservations about her action in the case of a European war.

Mr. King is not a parliamentary or platform orator of the first rank, but as a stump speaker he can be very effective and he has a rare nose for public sentiment and considerable skill as a politcial tactician. He has never married and is a man who has comparatively few intimate friends; in his younger days he was fond of social gaeties, but he has no longer much taste for them and likes to spend as much time as possible at a lovely country home which he has possessed for many years at Kingsmere in the Gatineau Hills; he has transformed the surrounding woodlands in something like an English park and he likes to live the life of a country squire in this beautiful demesne.

Langley Airmen Leave For West Coast Field

Newport News, Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—The Government transport St. Mihiel was en route today to Sunnyvale, Calif., with the bulk of the Nineteenth Air Squadron of Langley Field and its equipment. The transport sailed yesterday afternoon. The unit will establish its new headquarters on Moffet Field, which was acquired by the Army from the Navy some time ago.

In embarking upon the trip, the squadron joined more than 700 enlisted men of the Army who were being transferred to posts along the route—some of them to Honolulu and other Pacific points. The vessel will go via the Panama Canal and is expected to reach California in about two weeks.

Bloody Richmond

Football Workers Arise!

MODERN college football, as the sports columnists never weary of pointing out, has become, within the memory of far from the oldest grad, a major industry. Even the seven lean years have witnessed no overwhelming descent in its productive chart and while the poor, who Mr. Farley asserts are no longer with us, perhaps have had to be content to take their lateral passes from the lips of breathless radio announcers and the adjectivial blurbists of the sports pages, there have been thousands willing and eager to pay for the privilege of seeing 22 overgrown boys scramble in the mud for almost any dear old alma mater. In this particular industry the supply has met the demand without benefit of any alphabetical agency and there has been no plowing under of halfback.

Because of the industrial atmosphere that hovers over the stadia it is difficult for some of us not to take Saturday's embroglio at Richmond seriously. It seems to be a situation where something ought to be done. At least it should be called to the attention of the Civil Liberties Union and perhaps a letter ought to be printed in the New Republic asking all liberal-minded citizens to contribute their nickels and dimes to the cause. It may even become necessary to enlist the legalistic talent of Mr. Lebowitz before the matter is settled, for the case of the Georgetown boys seems destined to become a cause celebre.

OF course, one only knows what one reads in the capitalistic press, which never prints anything against the bosses and calls policemen just that, instead of cossacks. But from eye-witnesses I have gathered the impression that the policemen acted as they generally do when the workers, unable longer to repress their dissatisfaction with their unhappy lot, get out of hand. True, the rioters were not from the field of play, but were from the sidelines, yet they are as much a part of the football industry as the actual participants. And getting the goal posts is as much a part of the game as making a touchdown. The police, however, with their usual stupidity, mistook the Georgetown boys for picketers and so bloodied up that Virginia meadow just as if it had been the wire-fenced yard of a cotton mill.

We of the left, who believe in the right of any man to play football or steal a goal post, are resentful of the actions of the cossacks importing to this peaceful Southern city the tactics of Paterson, N. J., or San Francisco, Calif. We are also resentful of the Director of Public Safety, who watched the riot from the stands, issuing a statement after the Georgetown boys had been hauled off to the hospital, in which he uttered sentiments reeking, as we radicals say, with Fascist implications.

"The policemen were here to protect private property," said Director Cutchins. "The officers were instructed to use all reasonable force to guard the goal posts, but that is no excuse for brutality."

That's what police chiefs have been saying, after the fact, ever since the industrial revolution!

• • • •

BUT that doesn't mend the heads of martyrs lying in their beds of pain. It merely makes the workers more angry, it but hastens the day of reckoning, brings closer the dawn of the revolution. What is private property compared to the inalienable right of every sophomore, enrolled in college or long since graduated, to indulge in harmless Saturday afternoon rioting on a football field?

From campus to campus the spirit of the workers in the great football industry will now revive, after bloody Richmond. We no doubt may look for more riots as the anger spreads. For, unorganized as the industry may be, the seeds of dissent have been sown and, if Mr. William Green doesn't work quickly to curb the leftward turn, we may soon be hearing "The Internationale" instead of "Down the Field" and "Boola Boola" when Harvard and Yale, those ancient rival football factories, hold their annual outing.

affair under the auspices of their respective benevolent associations (or company unions) and their absentee owners.

• • • •

INSTEAD of the stamping of feet and the hoarse cries of "Get that touchdown, get that touchdown," as the stepped-up workers struggle to reach their quota for the day, we may be hearing soon, "Remember Bloody Richmond!" or "Save the Georgetown Boys!" or "Down With the Cossacks! We demand our rights! Give us goal posts or——!" as the angry sympathizers surge upon the field.

For on every side I have heard the Richmond rioters defended and the cossacks berated. I am convinced that out of bloody Richmond is dawning a better understanding of the brotherhood of man. All the football workers need is a leader; they have the slogans. If they can find him they will surge to victory in the last unorganized major industry in America. I can see him now, tall, raccoon-coated, proudly displaying the flask of his high calling, typical American football worker, leading the dispossessed to victory and goal posts from Soldiers Field to the Rose Bowl in the greatest industrial uprising since the Pullman strike

What! Another Florida Boom?

Miami Beach, Fla.—They may have to change that slogan to "Come to Miami where it's always boom!" All that is needed to make this place look like the days of the Florida boom is the presence of the "binder boys."

• • • •

In the greatest building development in its history, Miami Beach is today dotted with new hotels, apartment hotels, stores and private residences sprouting like tropical vegetation. Seven new skyscraper hotels are now going up on the ocean front and when the winter visitors arrive they will think it's all done by mirrors.

• • • •

Everybody seems to be going some place with a set of blueprints, a cement mixer, a wheelbarrow or a tape measure. The old excitement of the boom days is in the air, the papers are full of real estate transactions and those who dabble in properties are dancing "check to check," as Irving Berlin might sing it.

• • • •

To your correspondent, who is making his first trip outside of the midwinter season, the crowds and activity are amazing. There's the same unending stream of traffic on the main causeway and just as much trouble as ever finding a parking space in Biscayne boulevard, Miami.

• • • •

The sound of hammer and saw is heard all over Miami center as stores, newly leased, are remodeled, but it is at Miami Beach that the building activity seems like something done with Aladdin's Lamp.

• • • •

For the first time in years it looks as if there might be room for the visiting Elks at reasonable rates and no last minute price boosting.

• • • •

The old place looks almost as gay as in midwinter, especially along Biscayne boulevard. The band is playing in the park . . . the park is teeming with coatless visitors . . . from below comes the cry of newsies, "Full racing results!" . . . You forget for a moment that there is no racing here yet and that the results are from other parts.

• • • •

A big chain restaurant, open for the first time all year, calls itself the Bingham Club . . . The movie houses are crowded and all the streets in Miami center are teeming with activity . . . auto traffic on Biscayne boulevard (the Rue de Chaos) is four abreast . . . a newsboy bawls "34 Below in North" and a purchase reveals a small headline of weather conditions in Alaska! . . . Great sales promotion experts, these Florida newsboys!

• • • •

It looks and sounds like Florida in midwinter except that there are only two or three yachts in the bay, and you don't see the "Dog Track" sign in red lights.

• • • •

Joe Copps is back and after one look at the transformed beach waterfront wired Steve Hannagan: "Think I am back at Miami Beach; please confirm."

• • • •

And are the hotel and amusement men ga-ga? Don't ask what they think of the outlook. It means you'll be tied up for the night . . . And all this week, what do you think is here? Ringling Brothers Circus!

Skin Protected During Winter By 2 Products

Herbal Oil and Throat and Neck Blends Offered at Special Sale.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THIS IS the time of year when the prudent woman casts about for creams that will protect her skin against the harshening effects of winter weather. She well knows that unless she takes care of her complexion during the trying months to come it is likely to become wrinled, coarse and rough.

For this need a certain cosmetician known for the splendid quality of her products is sponsoring an important event in Washington this week. She offers two of her most outstanding preparations—an herbal oil blend and throat and neck blend at an exceptional price.

Ordinarily these products sell for $5.50, $11, and $22, but for some time there has been a trial size of each selling for $2. For clients who use them regularly, and for women who want to become acquainted with them this cosmetician offers a special trial size jar which contains double the usual quantity while the price remains the same —$2.

Don't think that the benefits of these two fine preparations are confined to the protection they give against the water. The oil blend, rich in nourishing ingredients, is the cream for dry skin. The throat and neck blend makes the throatline smooth and youthful. Added to this, they supply natural oils to skin exposed to sun and wind.

Bear in mind that many a woman's age is told plainly by the lines and crepy skin of her neck. In fact, many women who suffer from this condition appear much older than they are. Why don't you—and you—and you—guard against this by proving to yourself such a condition can be remedied if given the proper treatment?

Polish for the Hands.

YOU MAY dramatize your hands by using the splendid polish made by a certain beauty stylist. It costs you little, too. You may buy small handy bottles for only 25 cents!

Many women prefer this size because they are sure to use the polish up before it comes thick and streaky, as almost all such preparations will when kept too long.

The shades are delightful. Naturelle is ultra smart for daytime or evening. It is particularly recommended for women with short, stubby fingers. It harmonizes well with such dress colors as vivid blues, bright green, purple, orange and bright red.

Medium is the color of a blue rose and particularly flattering to fair-skined women. Ideal for pastels.

Coral favors the darker type and goes beautifully with black or white costumes, beiges, grays, pale pinks and medium browns.

Flame is the perfect choice for those who prefer a brighter polish on occasions. It's fine for all colors but red.

Brilliant is very effective for extreme blondes or brunettes. It demands, however, that the hands be perfectly groomed.

Krinkly Rubber Capes.

THE ANSWER to smartness in the driving rain lies in the new krinkly rubber capes shown in a downtown store.

These are strictly tailored with small buttons down the front. They fit loosely over the shoulders and are voluminous enough to allow pulling them closely around for protection against the wind and rain.

They come in soft lovely shades. The price is $1.

Solved Career Problem.

MRS. ELIZABETH M. COX.

Early Marriage Fails to Block Career at Bar

Mrs. Elizabeth Cox Kept House While Working for a Degree.

WOMEN WHO marry young and are keeping house and rearing children, while some of their friends are succeeding in careers, often regret they made their choice so early. But in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, recently admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court, there was no choice about it.

Although she has both a wedding ring and a career, she decided in favor of the former before she ever thought of the latter. Not only that but she was married several years before she made up her mind to enter the same profession as her husband.

"Long before that, however, I had been interested in law," she said yesterday, "hoping some day, some way, I'd have a chance to study. But for a long time my time was chiefly taken up with my home and the rearing of my son and daughter."

Studied for Law Degree.

With her children in school, however, she began to look around for something to occupy her spare time. This eventually led her to George Washington University Law School. Then, by following a part-time schedule, arranging her classes so they wouldn't conflict too much with her home life, she managed to finish the course in five years. The same June her daughter was graduated from junior high school and her son finished high school, she was receiving her law degree.

"That degree represented much hardship, much sacrifice," she admitted. "Swinging two full-time jobs is no joke, and I kept house the entire time I attended school. I had to give up social engagements entirely (in fact, I almost forgot how to play bridge those five years), as well as all organization work. Even considering that, I hardly know now how I managed to get through. But I can't tell you how glad I am I did it. Now, since my children are grown, my work has given me new goals, new interests and a new lease on life."

Active in Organizations.

She said the latter with a note of merriment, her wide brown eyes twinkling, as she added, "And when a woman gets to be a grandmother, she generally needs some fresh interests."

Since she finished law school Mrs. Cox has been engaged in private practice, and now has an office in the Southern Building. She has also been active in local and national organizations, being a member of the American Bar Association, the National Association of Women Lawyers, the D. C. Women's Bar Association and the bar of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

Suggestions for Achieving Self-Confidence, Self-Reliance, Courage, Self-Esteem and Self-Control Are Asked by Man Reader.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I read your articles every day with great admiration. You frequently extol self-confidence, self-reliance and courage as the first of virtues. I wish you would give more specific details to aid one in developing such qualities, together with self-esteem and self-control.

I should also appreciate your giving me a good brief bibliography of the sources which you have found most valuable in providing the knowledge and wisdom which is revealed through your writings. I am intellectually able to benefit from reading any works, with the possible exception of highly technical writings, since I am both college graduate and lawyer. Thanking you for such help as you may be able to give me, I am, yours, truly,

W. T. R.

How Character Is Cast.

DEAR W. T. R.: It is my belief that whatever qualities of character the individual possesses—of positive, negative or passive type—are principally derived from two main sources. These two sources are, first, heredity, and, second early environment and training.

This is not to say, however, that the mature person with good intellectual endowment cannot modify inherited tendencies toward socially unsatisfactory character and conduct, even when such tendencies have been reinforced by unwholesome early environment and improper early training. But such modification must be arrived at as much by the intelligent and disciplinary application of wisdom learned through experience, as by the adoption of theories academically acquired. In other words, unless one possesses some aptitude for learning through first-hand experience and observation, it is doubtful if one can derive any benefit that is real and lasting from studying the writings of others.

I believe the individual must have some measuring stick of his own, evolved from actual living, to use in determining the applicability to his own necessities of those theories, practices and philosophies advanced by any self-constituted authorities. I believe it is wise to entertain at all times a kind of critical hospitality to new ideas.

• • • •

It is impossible to give in the limited space of such a column as this "specific details to aid one in the developing of such qualities" as self-confidence, self-reliance, courage, self-esteem and self-control. For that reason, I shall confine my remarks in that regard to the following:

Self-confidence and self-reliance derive from courage, and accrue to the man who discovers his own intelligence, wisdom, resourcefulness and courage are to be trusted in crises when important decisions and actions affecting his destiny are to be made. Courage is an acquired characteristic. It is not lack of a sense of fear. It is a consciously enforced resolution on the part of man not to be governed by fear.

• • • •

Self-esteem is a quality of character which follows naturally in the wake of orderly, honorable and successful living. It is a by-product of satisfactory social adjustment to one's sphere in life and to one's family and friends.

• • • •

Self-control is a matter of right thinking. The man who achieves consistent self-control is he who deliberately and consistently cultivates the habit of obeying his reason and not his emotions. "Reason," says Webster's dictionary, "commonly suggests especially that guiding or directing faculty distinguishing men from the lower animals." To recognize the existence and foster the growth of this saving faculty is, therefore, to aim at self-control.

• • • •

I must beg off providing a bibliography of sources of knowledge and wisdom, for the simple reason that I possess no such reference library. Although reading has been a favorite diversion of mine since I laboriously mastered the intricacies of the alphabet at the usual age, it has followed no pattern and pursued no purpose. Whatever comes to hand, I read, with the sole exception of detective stories.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Sleek Lines Are Chief Feature Of New Underwear for Winter

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The new underwear collections feature suave little businesses—step-ins, slips, all-in-ones—that are designed to turn her out looking—and feeling—sleek and smooth and utterly ship-shape. Satin is the shining highlight of the group, with crepe and the knitted silk, runners-up.

The new slips (many of petal-soft satin and smoothies for fit) are featuring dark colors this fall and winter. For wear under dark dresses, of course. There are shiny coal blacks . . . deep seal browns . . . and dark navies galore. With a good sprinkling of soft tea rose and petal pink, too.

Tailored to a "T."

No matter how much frou frou she likes on the outside, chances are that she'll want her underwear to have slick-as-a-whistle lines and be tailored to a "T." Glance at the dark slip sketched . . . it fits like an evening dress and it's as devoid of ruffles as her brother's tuxedo.

Frou Frou if You Like.

The all-in-one is certainly back in the fashion picture this season. You see one above, all prettied up to the nth degree, with lace, embroidery and more lace. For the lady who likes her ruffles and intends to have them!

Taffeta and Dust Ruffles.

The lass who likes her gay ninety dust ruffles with a good dash of Scotch will revel in slips like the plaid taffeta sketched. Its soft swish adds assurance to an outfit, too.

The perennial vest and step-in is mighty popular again this year. The step-ins cling snugly and warmly as in the sketch . . . a good idea, since the months of snow and ice are looming mighty close.

Lace.

If lace is used, it'll probably be dark and rich-looking—whether it's a whole deep yoke or just a lace edging. "Elegance" is fashion's motto this season . . . from the outside in and from the inside out!

Tomorrow: Boys' winter overcoats can take wear and tear.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

ANYTHING from a Mae West furbelow to a Marlene Dietrich tailleur is the fashion for windows this season. Anything that is becoming . . . because windows have personality, too—some wear trains with dignity and others don't look well in ruffles. So—lady fair—tilt your head at a critical angle and diagnose your windows for curtains as you do yourself for a new hat.

E. S. WRITES: I can't make up my mind on Venetian blinds which I'd love to have in my living rooms. Are they too austere for ordinary types of furnishings? It seems to me that I've only seen them used with rather extreme modern things and I don't want that. Yet I do love them and think they'd be nice to cut down the glare of a west exposure. We have figured draperies of old rose with pale green ground. What color would you advise having the blinds painted? The walls of the room are also pale green. I'm getting a new sofa and chairs. What would you advise for the coverings? Also for the rug here?

• • • •

ANSWER: No, Venetian blinds are perfectly all right with almost any type of furniture. I'd paint them the same pale green of the walls and the drapery background. Then have the sofa in heliotrope and the two chairs in deep gladiola tones. I think I'd like an Oriental patterned rug with an ivory ground and ever so many other glowing deep tones in the pattern.

THE MARQUESA DE SANTA ANA Y SANTA MARIA.

Composer-Pianist Is Here for Winter

Marquesa de Santa Ana y Santa Maria Hailed by Massanet.

She Describes Debutante's Life in Paris in the 19th Century.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A SLIP of a girl with a rose-petal complexion, light brown hair and wide dark eyes had come from her home in Spain to continue her study of music. Friends had obtained for her an audience with Jules Massanet, famous French composer. He had agreed to listen while she played, to ascertain whether, in his opinion, she really was a talented musician.

As the last notes of the selection died away, he arose, walked toward her and cried, "You not only have a talent for music, you have genius!"

That girl, now a woman with grown daughters and a son, has recently come to Washington from New York, has reopened her home on Sixteenth street for the winter. She is the Marquesa de Santa Ana y Santa Maria, a descendant of the Spanish nobility, and a widely-known composer and pianist in her own right.

Tradition Costs Fame.

Today, but for one thing, her name would probably be among the most noted musicians of all time. The Spanish tradition dictated that girls of noble birth should have only one career in those days—marriage. In other words, a girl whose list of ancestors included such distinguished names as King Alfonso, King Ferdinand, Eugenia de Montijo (who became the Empress Eugenie of France), and Vasco P. de Figueroa (who financed De Soto's expedition to Florida), did not, as a rule, consider pursuing any career for financial gain. It was all right to study music, art or literature, to play or paint if one enjoyed it as a diversion, to appear as an artist at private concerts, or to compose music for one's friends; but that was all.

That was why the girl, who at 15 had played before Massanet, relegated her musical activity to second place for a time while she made her debut to society in Paris the following winter.

Received Degree at 13.

Yesterday, telling something of a debutante's life in the French capital in the nineteenth century, the marquesa mentioned that, after she was presented at a ball given by Isabella (grandmother of former King Alfonso), "there was time for nothing but social life the whole winter. I attended luncheons, teas, balls, the opera and concerts; but there wasn't a spare moment for practicing and composing that year. Much as I enjoyed it all, I was glad I had worked hard at my music for many years before; that I had already gained a little recognition in something that later gave me so much satisfaction."

At 13 she had received the degree of master of music at the Conservatory of Madrid, had won first honors in a competition with musicians much older than she, and had been complimented by Serano, professor of the conservatory, in these words: "If you only wore pants, you would be the greatest musician of the epoch."

Before that, she had won the acclaim of leading French and Spanish critics by playing Beethoven, Chopin and Haydn at private concerts and had won the title of the "Mozart of the nineteenth century." Also, she had introduced compositions of Debussy and Brahms to Spanish music lovers, and had been invited to accompany numerous artists—Sarasate, Fernandez, Arbos, Rubio, Monasterio—on concert tours, had refused "because my family objected."

So the slip of a girl who came to play for Massanet and to study with Diemer (who said it was useless to give her lessons because "she is already a star") stayed to be presented to society, and soon found her music was for a time put aside in favor of a whirl of parties.

A Student of Philosophy.

"I do not regret it," the marquesa said. "I have always enjoyed being with people, meeting new ones, attending luncheons, teas and balls much as debutantes do now. Only then, in Europe, one never attended a party for women exclusively. Men were always present. When I first came to America I was astounded that women would dress up in their newest frocks and go to luncheons where there were no men! The shock was equally as great to them when I invited men to my luncheons. Now I am used to the American custom, and to women's clubs, which also puzzled me at first."

Besides her social and musical interests, the marquesa is a student of philosophy, is particularly interested in literature and has taken an active part in the feminist movement in Europe.

Now, with an address and a circle of friends in New York, Havana, Madrid and Washington, the marquesa spends much time traveling and entertaining. In 1932 she returned to her ancestral home in Spain, and later stayed for a time in Cuba. Last winter she was in New York. Now with her daughter, Miss Maria Isabel de Arostegui, she plans to be in Washington for the winter.

Youths' Clubs Take Big Part In Recreation

By Lenore K. Bartlett.

IN THESE DAYS of apartment living and lack of space, we must look more and more to outside organizations to help us solve the recreational end of our children's lives. It is more important than ever that they learn to adapt themselves to other people and to new situations and the way to equip them with this knowledge is to make education more playful and play more educational. The present day home is not equipped to cope with this training nor are most of the schools, at least as yet.

In their book, "Organizations for Youth," Elizabeth R. Pendry and Hugh Hartshorn give the "history, scope, organization, methods and underlying philosophy of 40 leisure time agencies such as Scouts, Campfire Girls, Woodcraft League of American Boy Rangers, Pioneer Youth of America, four "B" Clubs, etc. It is well for us to look into these organizations for they are instituted to meet the leisure time needs of our children.

One of these groups with which I am familiar is the Girl Reserves. In the District of Columbia, there are 5,000 Girl Reserves to lead directly or indirectly to the fulfillment of the purposes of the Y. W. C. A. The purpose of the girl reserves is to "Face life squarely and to find and give the best." The aim is to "Help in the building of personality and of attitudes in line with social progress and to secure for girls that abundant life which we call good." This organization is open to all junior and senior high school girls and is free. There are no awards and the interest of the girls are served by meetings at the "Y" every week, planning and working out programs. Hand crafts, hiking, hobbies, meetings, skating, social service and interclass activities bring all the high school Girl Reserve clubs into close association. Operettas are given every spring and at Christmas, all the girls work in the toyshop.

The value in these organizations seems to me to be in the broadening horizon given the girls and the adaption of individual psychology to group needs. They offer a wider and more varied field than is possible in school or home. They offer companionship and fill the minds of the girls with keen interest and social service.

Earache Often Is the Sequel To Acute Cold

Neglected It May Cause Mastoid Involvement or Brain Abscesses.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

DURING the period of its existence the common cold is never really welcome. It comes, it lingers, and finally departs, reluctant to surrender so pleasant a host. It is an annoyance to be dealt with promptly and firmly. Patience has no place in the management of a cold, as the "critter" cannot understand kind treatment. Ninety-eight out of every 100 attacks will recede without damage or complications.

Children have great difficulty in building sufficient resistence to insure against chronic infections. A single cold may be recovered from completely, a second nearly so, but the tenth or fifteenth may leave a nest of bacteria in a nasal sinus, at the bottom of a crypt in one of the tonsils, in the middle ear or in some other part of the body. These potential danger spots smolder along, pouring poison into the system and, when the situation is ripe, serve as tinder to light the flame of a general disease.

About 2 per cent of these acute colds will be followed by a complication—in other words, an incomplete recovery. A nasal sinus may have to be drained, abscesses may form in the middle ear (running ear) and infection of the kidney, of the heart or of the lungs may occur.

An aching ear must not be ignored, and it is far wiser to open the drum, if bulging is present, than to permit pressure to continue until the membrane ruptures of its own accord, in which case there is often a ragged tear, one that may cause damage to the delicate hearing structures. It requires considerable skill to make the proper incision in the eardrum. Free drainage must be sought and secured so that relief may be as speedy as possible. Natural healing of the drum will then follow. Unless the drainage is adequate and after care is proper, a chronic runing ear with a foul discharge may result.

We must regard infection of the middle ear as a major surgical situation. In many ways it equals in importance an attack of acute appendicitis, although it probably does not manifest the same life-destroying possibilities. It means that inflammation exists in a dangerous spot, which, if neglected, may be responsible for mastoid involvement, brain abcesses, meningitis, or loss of hearing.

Culbertson On Contract

Duplication of Values.

A CONSTANT menace to even the best contract bridge bidding is "duplication of values." I have wrestled with the bogey, duplication of values, from the beginning of my bridge researches. While I freely confess that it is a formidable opponent and one which to this day still floors me every so often, I feel I also can claim some notable victories. The 4-5 no trump convention, in my view, decimated its prowess, for now we can distinguish in the bidding between a king-queen combination, which counts one honor trick, and an ace, which also counts one honor trick, but which is much more important in slam bidding. The new void-showing bid further weakened my opponent. But to my chagrin it still is on its feet—groggy perhaps and wavering, but still menacing.

Let us consider a typical example of the type of duplication of values that cannot, in our present state of advancement, be either expressed or weighed through the bidding.

NORTH	SOUTH
♠ A K 8 7 3	♠ Q J 10 5
♥ 9 4 2	♥ A K 6 5
♦ Q 8 4	♦ J 7
♣ A 6	♣ J 10 2

With these hands, North and South logically will bid four spades and will be defeated, losing one heart, two diamonds, and one club even against mediocre defense. But let us transform the diamond queen into the heart queen. This makes North's hand, viewed separately, no stronger. But four spades, and possibly five, becomes a laydown. This difference cannot be allowed for in the bidding.

There are dozens of such hands, in which the change from one suit to another of a comparatively lowly card such as a queen or jack spells success or failure. Perhaps some day we shall find a means of overcoming this factor. I, for one, still am wrestling.

An Accurate Count.

Only through getting a count of his opponents' hands was the declarer able to fulfill his seven heart contract on the following deal:

NORTH
♠ A J 10 8
♥ A J 9 7

WEST
♠ K Q
♥ 5 4 2
♦ K Q J 10 9 6 4

EAST
♠ 9 7 5 4 2
♣ J 8 7 6 3

SOUTH
♥ K Q 10 8 6
♦ A 5 2
♣ A 9 4

The bidding (North-South vulnerable):

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♠	Pass	2♥	3♦
4♥	Pass	4NT	5♦
5NT	Pass	6♦	7♦
Pass	Pass	7♥ (final bid)

The opening lead was the spade king, won by North's ace. A diamond was led to the ace, then a diamond ruffed in dummy. A heart lead gave South the lead and his third diamond was ruffed with the heart ace. When East failed to follow, West was placed with an original holding of seven diamonds. Another round of hearts caused East to discard, and proved that West had originally held three hearts. Ten of his cards were accounted for, and his opening lead of the spade king indicated that he had also held the queen. He probably had no more than one club, which was unlikely to be the jack. The lead was still in dummy, so a club was led and South finessed his nine. This held, and he drew trumps and ran the remaining clubs, discarding his losing spade.

Today's Question.

Question: With A K 6 4 2 of trumps in one hand, and J 10 8 5 in the other, how should declarer play the combined holding to avoid the loss of a trick?

Answer: The best play, by a slight margin, is to lead out the ace and king, hoping that the queen is guarded no more than once and will drop. But if there is any indication that one opponent has a singleton trump, then the king should be led (to drop a possible singleton queen), after which the other hand should be entered to lead the jack and finesse for the queen.

Then the pictures are previewed and they get great notices in the trade papers . . . Then these same pictures go to New York and they get panned and they don't do any business. Something must happen to them when they're on the train." . . . Over at Warners' they are preparing a flicker about Beethoven and F. Hugh Herbert suggests that it be called "G. Minor Man."

Herbert Timberg and Dixie Dunbar is a new Hollywood romance . . . A producer had two important playwrights working on a scenario. The script was fine except that it lacked gags . . . However, he got on the phone, woke up Dempsey and said: "This is Kelly. I'm in the lobby. Come down and I'll take the championship away from you." Dempsey, tired, answered: "You take the championship tonight, Mark, and return it to me in the morning" . . . A certain director was making retakes of a flicker at Metro and Robert Hopkins, the scenario writer, exclaimed, "Oh, he's making a great picture good."

London, Nov. 4.—With trading active, the stock exchange registered a cheerful tone today. The municipal elections and Chancellor of the Exchequer Chamberlain's speech caused an improvement in gilt-edged securities, industrials and home rails. Oil and transatlantic issues benefited from favorable American advices, while Chinese bonds hardened on the abandonment of the silver standard in that country. Gold mining shares were better owing to continental buying. The market closed firm.

Paris—Accumulation of orders over the week-end holiday advanced prices on the bourse today. The rise was also favorably influenced by reports from Wall street and London markets. Oil, mining, chemical, metal and coal shares showed the most marked gains. The market closed firm.

Berlin—After selling orders had caused lower prices at the opening of the boerse today, quotations recovered slightly and closed sustained.

Nice Vetoes Early Extra Session Plan

Governor Acts on Advice of Legislators and Business Men.

Committee to Be Named to Draw Up New Tax Program.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 4.—There will be no immediate emergency session of the Legislature to consider relief matters, Gov. Harry W. Nice said today after a group of his legislative and business advisors voted unanimously against the proposal.

However, the Governor said that he would at once appoint a committee to formulate a tax plan to be presented to the Legislature. It will be prepared in time for submission to a special session, which will be called early next year.

"For the time being I shall not call a special session," the Governor said, "in deference to the judgment of the gentlemen who met with me today.

"We feel that we should have complete information as to the relief situation in Maryland now and at the time of the expiration of the gross receipts tax."

Make-Up of Committee.

The receipts tax will expire on March 31, 1936, and the later special session will be called before then.

The Governor's tax committee, he said, would be composed of five men not connected with either relief or the Legislature. Three of the members will be from the counties and two from the city. This committee will gather data, sift tax plans, consult with legislators and business men and finally draft the new tax plan.

The Governor said he would then submit this plan to the Legislature with the recommendation that it be enacted. The committee would be appointed within two or three days, Nice said. It will be nonpartisan, and he stressed his statement that the relief plan would have no political significance.

Those who met with the Governor and voted against the immediate summoning of a session were Joseph P. Healy, of the Baltimore emergency relief commission; Howard Bruce, head of the Baltimore community fund drive; State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles, Emanuel Gorfine, speaker of the House of Delegates; Kent R. Mullikin, Democratic floor leader in the house; Thomas L. Popp, minority floor leader in the house; Senator J. David Baile, Republican floor leader in the senate; Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, William L. Henderson, assistant attorney general; Samuel E. Shannahan, chairman of the board of State Aid and Charities, and Harry Greenstein, head of the Maryland Relief Administration.

Effect of Federal Dictum.

Senator J. Alan Coad, Democratic floor leader in the senate; Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the senate, and Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., were unable to attend. However, the Governor said, each of them had informed him that he was against an immediate session.

The proposal for an immediate meeting of the Assembly arose because of the Federal Government's ultimatum that direct relief will cease December 1. This ultimatum does not present an emergency grave enough to warrant the immediate session, those present held.

While the Governor's advisers were meeting on the question of direct relief, a study of those on work relief showed that in only a few Maryland counties were there more than half the relief-case load on Works Progress Administration projects.

The case load of a county is the number of families receiving relief in it. WPA projects in the State are of two classes, some sponsored by the county or town and some sponsored by the Federal Government.

Relief Chairman Quits.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keyser, W. Va., Nov. 4.—Attorney William MacDonald, who has served as chairman of the Mineral County relief committee for two years, has resigned effective November 1. The position is without salary.

Quesenberry Receives 7 Years in Shooting

Second Sentence Meted to Mountaineer in Kirkpatrick Case.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 4.—The final episode in the prosecution of Tom Quesenberry was written into the records of court here today when Judge J. R. H. Alexander gave the 56-year-old Bible-reading hill man a sentence of seven years on his plea of guilty in the shooting of George Kirkpatrick, Federal investigator.

It was the second sentence Quesenberry, the object of one of the wildest manhunts in the police history of the Old Dominion, had received. Last July he was sentenced to 20 years in the fatal shooting of Clarence J. McClary, an Alexandria policeman. McClary was shot from a distance of 500 yards by Quesenberry as 30 deputies and Federal men pursued the one-eyed rifleman through the hills south of here.

The hunt was instigated after the Kirkpatrick shooting on the afternoon of March 16. Today Kirkpatrick, still suffering the effects of the shot which severed an artery, was unable to be present.

"First Home" Since Babyhood.

Brought here from the State penitentiary at Richmond last night by Sheriff E. S. Adrian, Quesenberry told of the "first home he had had since he was a boy."

"I've got a job," he drawled softly to Judge Alexander, "and jobs are scarce at the penitentiary. I don't want to cause no delay and I'm not a hard man to please. Could we come to some understanding today?"

After a conference with a court-appointed attorney, Albert Anderson, Quesenberry pleaded guilty.

Later he explained his job at the penitentiary. "It's in the furniture finishing department," he revealed readily. "Last week I refinished an old chair for Gov. Peery's mansion. It had a thick coat of paint over it, but I finally got it down to the natural wood. It was a tough job.

Sorry It Happened.

Dressed in a pin striped suit and a new gray cap, Quesenberry presented a different picture than the raw day he was captured 10 miles south of here. His grizzled beard had disappeared along with his sun and wind-bronzed complexion.

Shortly after the additional sentence was pronounced today, "Old Tom" walked over to Clyde Saunders, former Federal investigator, and Paul Alexander, Loudoun County deputy. They were present at both of the shootings. He offered his hand.

"There ain't no hard feelings; you have been very kind to me," he said. "I'm sorry it happened."

Pool Pay-Off Man Says He Was Robbed

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—Hyman Krystel, 29, self-styled "pay-off man" for a football pool, told police this morning that two armed white men held him up, drove his car to a nearby alley and took $1,500 from him. Krystel was not injured.

Krystel told the police that he had drawn the money from a bank here Friday to pay off winners of a pool on Saturday's football games.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Nov. 4.—Hotel men from Winchester to Bristol and Danville will meet here Friday for a conference of Group One of the Southern Hotel Association. Hotel men from Richmond, Washington, and Baltimore also have been invited. The meeting will be held at Stonewall Jackson Tavern, opening with a business session in the afternoon, followed by a banquet.

Virginia Vote Today Elects '36 Assembly

2,000 Candidates Face Voters; Many Local Jobs Involved.

Henrico Race Warmed by Fight to Name Supervisors.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4.—Virginia voters will go to the polls tomorrow to participate in the selection of members of the 1936 General Assembly and to choose officers to fill various local posts. More than 2,000 candidates are running for the various offices in the Old Dominion.

The campaign has been one of the quietest in years, with close races expected in only a few instances among the 43 General Assembly contests. County elections in most cases overshadow the legislative contests.

Among the few stirring races for the State enate is the struggle between Harry C. Stuart, of Elk Garden, the Democratic nominee, and Dr. J. W. Witten, of Tazewell, Independent, in the Buchanan-Tazewell-Russell District. This is the home district of Gov. George C. Peery.

In Patrick County Democrats will be listed in opposition on the ticket tomorrow, with no primary having been held. T. J. George, incumbent in the House of Delegates, is opposed for re-election by C. L. Spangler, who formerly represented the county.

Dr. Woodson Offered.

Dr. J. Belmont Woodson, a Democrat, who has represented Amherst and Nelson counties in the Senate for 16 years, is opposed for re-election by John Ryland Coleman, speech-making farmer, former member of the House of Delegates from Nelson.

Announcement that representation of counties and cities in the State Democratic convention next year will be on the basis of the vote cast has caused party chieftains to redouble their efforts to get out the vote in the section where the nominees had nominal or no opposition.

The total vote in many districts will be swelled by keen rivalries which have developed among candidates for county offices, notably in Henrico, where predictions are being made that the all-time record of 4,000 votes will be exceeded.

Fight Complicated.

The interest in Henrico was accelerated by the supervisors' race, which developed into a struggle between the independent caidates of a faction led by the Henrico Citizens' League, which two years ago sponsored a successful fight for the county manager form of government, and the straight Democratic ticket.

The southwest Virginia region will furnish the major battles at the polls with the keenest sort of races predicted in the balloting tomorrow in Scott County, where Republicans usually predominate; in Dickenson County, where Republicans have combined to oppose the regular Democratic nominees, and in Washington County, where Republicans have held a majority of the county offices.

Slapping Prankster Charged to Minister

Easton, Md., Nov. 4 (AP).—The Rev. J. Harry Wright was charged today with assaulting an 11-year-old boy because of a Halloween prank, but a hearing on the charges was postponed because the minister had been called away to officiate at a funeral.

The warrant charged the clergyman with "slapping" Beverly Kline. It was sworn out by the lad's father, Irving Kline, furniture store manager.

Wright, pastor of Ebenezer Methodist Church, was alleged to have struck the boy after a group of young people visited his home Halloween night. The minister said the boys had tried to take his name plate from his door. He was alleged to have caught the Kline boy and turned him over to an officer, who released him.

Admiral Best And Party Visit Naval Academy

British Officers, Midshipmen Spend 3½ Hours in Annapolis.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 4.—British officers and midshipmen from the West Indies squadron of the royal navy spent three and a half hours here today visiting the Naval Academy and watching the American midshipmen at their studies and duties.

The British group consisted of 19 officers and 12 midshipmen from the British cruisers Danae and York, now anchored at Baltimore and Washington. Three officers and five midshipmen came from the Danae in Baltimore, the remainder from the York.

Party Headed by Admiral.

Vice Admiral Sir Matthew R. Best, commander of the British America and West Indies squadron, headed the party and was received with full military honors on his arrival. The marine guard saluted, the academy band gave three ruffles and flourishes and played the "Admiral's March," and a 15-gun salute was fired. The British ensign flew from the forepeak of the U. S. S. Reina Mercedes during the firing.

Sir Matthew, who is a Knight Companion of the Bath and a member of the Distinguished Service and Victorian orders, was accompanied by Lady Best and their daughter, Miss Margaret Best. He was greeted by Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the academy, and his staff.

Taussig Makes Trip.

Included in the Washington group who came with the admiral were his flag officers, Capt. H. P. Boxer, commander of the York, and Lieut. J. R. B. Longden; Capt. F. C. Bradley, British naval attache at Washington and Mrs. Bradley, and Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, assistant British naval attache, and Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw.

30-Day Grace, Loan Granted Oystermen

Lack of Dredge Permits Drove Many From Maryland Shoals.

State Senator Phoebus Starts Inquiry, Lauds License Grant.

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., Nov. 4.—Maryland's hard-pressed oystermen were heartened today by a 30-day extension for obtaining dredging licenses and by a $1,000 loan to help them buy permits.

Dredgers driven from the oyster rocks for failure to secure licenses were cheered by the 30-day period of grace granted by Gov. Nice. The $1,000 loan was offered by Mayor Jackson of Baltimore to those unable to take out permits immediately. He turned over the fund to E. L. Quinn, Crisfield publisher.

Cooler Weather a Boon.

Meanwhile, the oyster industry was receiving another boost as the weather, unseasonably warm for two months, began to turn cooler. This had been awaited to increase the demand and send prices higher.

At Princess Anne, State Senator Harry T. Phoebus (Republican), Somerset, set out with Delegate Carl P. Hoffman (Democrat), Somerset, to try to run down a report that 23 Somerset County oyster boats had been ordered ashore by the Conservation Commission because they had not obtained dredging licenses.

Before learning of Gov. Nice's license extension, Phoebus had assailed the Republican State administration and the oyster policy of the Conservation Commission. He had high praise, however, for Mayor Jackson's loan to the watermen.

Phoebus said his first act at the special legislative session would be "to introduce a bill to grant watermen the same privileges enjoyed by merchants and traders of Maryland. Every retailer in Maryland is granted 30 days of grace in which to obtain licenses. Why not the watermen "

Many Secure Permits.

A fleet of unlicensed dregdging boats was ordered from Western Shore waters last week and put in at Annapolis, where many later secured licenses.

Search for Aviator Lost in Bay Renewed

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 4 (AP).—Search for the wreckage of a Navy land plane believed to contain the body of Lieut. Mathias M. Marple, U. S. N., was ordered resumed today.

Commander J. F. Shafroth, U. S. N., in charge of the search, assigned two 50-foot motor launches to the duty. They were equipped with a grappling outfit and diving rig and sent to the area south of Hacketts Point where wreckage was found Wednesday. The esarch was suspended Saturday.

Commander Shafroth ordered it resumed today shortly after he had received information from Washington that a piece of the plane had been found floating off Chesapeake Beach, 20 miles south of Hackett's Point.

Council Votes To Pave Street At Cumberland

Rejects WPA Project as Strike in Allegany Remains in Force.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 4.—As the Allegany County strike on works progress undertakings entered its second week, city council voted today to reject a repaving job as a Federal project and to do the work itself with city labor.

The men employed by the city to finish the North Center street repaving project would be paid 50 cents an hour, the rate set for city labor by law. The WPA walkout was called after efforts failed to secure a wage increase from 28.6 cents an hour to the 50-cent rate.

The council acted after being urged by William A. Miller, president of the Allegany Trades Council, which called the strike, to reject Federal aid on 16 other projects. The council did not act on two other projects abandoned by strikers.

Miller said the strike was unchanged. An Allegany County delegation rejected last Saturday the offer of Francis H. Dryden, State WPA director, to reduce working hours from 140 to 120 a month. The labor leader had demanded a reduction to 80 in lieu of a wage increase.

Court to Act In Broad Run School Strike

3 Parents Demand Jury Trial of Attendance Law Charges.

Frederick County Board Offer to Drop Case Is Spurned.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 4.—A demand of three parents for jury trial on charges of violating the compulsory attendance law today moved the Broad Run School "strike" toward an airing in circuit court.

The three parents, Rodney Huffner, Charles D. Beachley and Harry Sowers, each filed an appearance bond of $25. Date for the court hearing has not been set.

Their rejection of an offer of the county board of education to drop the prosecution of the two-months-old "strike" automatically sent the case to court.

Appear Before Magistrate.

The board's offer was made as the parents came before Magistrate Walter E. Sinn for a preliminary hearing. They had been served with warrants charging them with violation of the attendance law by refusing to send their children to the Middletown School with which the Broad Run School was consolidated.

Spurning the school board's offer, the parents demanded a jury trial "to air our case before the community and the people of Frederick County."

For two months they and several other parents have been sending their children to the abandoned Broad Run School for half an hour each day in protest to its consolidation.

Long Walk Protested.

They contended the consolidation made the walk too long for the pupils. But Eugene W. Pruitt, county superintendent of education, asserted bus transportation had been provided for those who had to make long walks.

Supetintendent Pruitt said the children of the three parents named in the warrants constituted a majority of the "strikers."

The warrants were issued on complaint of Attendance Officer Gertrude Smith. A delegation of "strikers" already had carried their protest to Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Irish Lose 3 Stars by Injuries as Northwestern Game Nears

Says Notre Dame Won by Praying . . . and Playing

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 4.—this explain Notre Dame's football success? The university's bulletin the day before the Ohio State game carried these items:

"Fill the hall chapels at mass and communion tomorrow for the team!"

From a fan. "I promised to have a mass of thanksgiving said if Marty ePters came through with his kick against Pitt. I was praying all the while. I haven't money enough, father, to offer a stipend. Will you say the mass and relieve my conscience?"

And from a campus student: "Please accept the $2.30 inclosed for Father Massart's fund. It is a thanksgiving in honor of our lady—a dime for each Notre Dame player. But I wish I could express it with dollars instead of dimes."

The Notre Dame team at Columbus attended church in a body the morning of the game. The team slept in a seminary and from these hallowed halls the boys went out and did their stuff, armed with blessed medals, a million prayers—and a hell of a pass attack.

Even the Notre Dame "B" team called on heaven for a little help. The guardian of Little Rock, Ark., headlined the fact that the squad of 30 members, including three Non-Catholics, marched into the cathedral at that city, sat through two masses and then went out and licked Ouchita College, 25 to 0. There ought to be a moral in this except for the fact that Ohio State had more Catholics and more Irish in its varsity stars than Notre Dame. And the winning touchdown was scored by a Jewish boy—Wayne Milner!

"I WANT my Red Wings rough, ready and unreasonable," yelped Jack Adams, as he opened the hockey training season . . . Jim Londos is training for a comeback, s'help us . . . Chick Meehan tried to ease up on his pal, Benny Friedman, during the Manhattan rout. Chick even had the periods sliced to 12 minutes but there was no holding 'em . . . Subsidization In South on Increase Fla. Alumni, Vanderbilt Head Lead Fight for Open Tactics.

Alumni Gift Plan Seen Best, but Money Is Hard to Find.

By the United Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 4.—Hysteria of terrific competitive pressure in intercollegiate football is forcing Southern universities toward a new realistic viewpoint on the question of athlete subsiidaries this year.

Florida alumni have approved definitely a plan for fixed compensation for athletes in major sports.

The editor of the University of Louisville student newspaper editorially has said. "To get a good football team, one pays for it."

Dr. James H. Kirkland, for 40 ears chancellor of Vanderbilt University at Nashville, has concluded that when scholarships are granted, "athletic ability" should be considered.

As football booms in the Southland, the tremendous pressure from alumni and undergraduates for a winning team is forcing the question o fthe dollar sign into new prominence.

Florida Is Pioneer.

Pioneering a path into a field hitherto shrouded in secrecy of back room alumni meetings, the Florida Alumni Assocaition made no effort to cover its program for providing compensation for star football players and outstanding leaders in other sports.

The program was adopted at a meeting marked by stormy outbursts. The chief difficulty, students point out, however, is that the scheme thus far is only a policy, not a practice. They point to Florida's miserable football record this year with victory over only one minor team.

A resolution approved by the alumni association provided that students engaged in major sports should receive compensation in the tender of scholarships on a rigid standard. The program, the resolution said, would be administered by the president of the university under definite rules.

The resolution favored a common scholarship fund, with the implication it would be built up over a period of years by alumni contributions. One alumnus of the school, however, explained the weakness of the plan.

No Cash Forthcoming.

"We believe the university is ready now to establish scholarships for athletes. But of all the alumni who make a yearly practice of raising a gripe over need of such a program, not one has come forward and planked down hard cash and said: 'Here's five hundred bucks—go out and get a good quarterback.'"

Speculations of Dr. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt, on the question of the dollar sign in football have been academic. But his conclusion is sufficiently realistic.

Kirkland believes that transfer of money from alumni to undergraduate athletes cannot be stopped completely. When scholarships are given out, he suggests, the issue of athletic skill may as well be faced and disposed of.

The Louisville editor strikes directly at the heart of the issue.

"Business is business," he says of football. "To get a good football team—one pays for it."

Rival Coaches Up U.N.C. Bowl Hopes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 4.—Take it from Wallace Wade, of Duke, and "Hunk" Anderson, of North Carolina State, a couple of rival football coaches woh are rivals, the University of North Carolina has one of the Nation's outstanding ball clubs this season.

"North Carolina looked better than Alabama s Rose Bowl eleven of last year," was Wade's compliment to the Tarheels' power. "Talk about Alabama's pass attack! I'll take Carolina s any time."

"The best team in either the Southern or Southeastern conferences," admitted Anderson, who formerly coached Notre Dame. "I've seen a lot of good football teams, and Carolina is one of the best."

'Twin Player' Investigated At U.C.L.A.

Key, Target of Charge, Denies Using Name of Brother.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 4.—Dean Earl J. Miller of the University of California, at Lost Angeles, today planned to hurry to Aamarillo, Tex., to discover, if possible, whether the Bruins' star fullback is really R. F. (Ted) Key or whether he is Ted's brother, Clois.

Key has been withheld from competition on anonymous allegations that he is not Ted Key but Clois, falsely enrolled under his brother's high school credentials.

Miller said he withheld Key from the California game Saturday during an extensive investigation of "rumors only" and stated further that these were from "anonymous sources."

Principal Phoned.

"The principal of Amarillo High School telephoned me Saturday morning," said Miller, "with the information that led to my action in withholding Key from the game. I didn't get the prinicpal's name but it was either Morton, Norton or Norman.

"He said he had found a man living at 723 Lincoln street, Amarillo, who said he was R. F. Key. Miller quoted the principal as saying the Key of Amarillo told him:

"'I am Ted Key. Clois Francis Key, my brother, is enrolled at the University of California at Los Angelis on my credentials and is playing there under my name. I want it stopped and will be glad to help expose it.'

Leaves for Texas.

"It was on this information that I took my action. I am going down to Amarillo to question the principal and this man because I believe the university is under obligation to Key to do so. If I find we are wrong I'll be the first to say so."

Key was heartbroken over the affair.

"It was the most unfair experience of my life," he said.

Pete Barber, a transfer trackle at U. S. L. A. who came here from Texas A. and M., said today he saw Clois Francis Key play at Texas School of Mines.

"He couldn't be Ted Key," said Barber. "Ted is a big man. Clois Francis was a little fellow."

Key's father, who is employed here as a night watchman, said he had five sons. The eldest, he said is Otis Nathaniel, a civil engineer at Eagle Lake, Tex.; Earl Lorenzo, who works for a motor car corporation in Dallas; Roy Clifton, a surveyor in Government employ at Ratcliff, Tex.; Clois Francis, who he believes is in Mexico, and Ted.

He said anyone should be able to tell the difference between Ted and Clois by their photographs.

"I don't think this fellow in Amarillo knows any one of my boys," he said, "let alone two of them."

Petersburg Wins, 39-0.

Eastern High Choice Over Western

Faces Threat, However, in Rivals' Parrying Offensive.

Curtin, Made Eligible by New Advisory, to Start in Game.

By John R. Vosburgh.

AS merry a scrap as the inter-high series is likely to bring forth is the attraction promised for this afternoon when Eastern and Western square off at Central Stadium in their annual gridiron grapple. Both teams will present rearranged line-ups as the result of new players whom the new Advisory made eligible yesterday.

Although Eastern will enter the game a marked favorite, the rough and ready Red team presents a sesious threat to the Lincoln Parkers' chances of keeping pace with Central's favored eleven.

A team which presented a stubborn, hard-tackling defense and a varied, parrying offensive against the powerful Central forces, Western served notice that it is a power to be reckoned with for the remainder of the series. It was Western's unexpected feat of holding Eastern to a 6-6 tie last year which put the Lincoln Parkers out of the championship running.

Joe Curtin to Play.

Coach Artie Boyd, of Eastern, will start at least one man made eligible by the Advisory in Joe Curtin, highly able ball carrier, who will replace Ross Kendricks at halfback. Boyd said he also may start Jake Madeoy, a fast-charging guard, also made eligible yesterday, in place of Bernie Herman.

Coach Dan Ahern, of Western, revealed yesterday that the ad-advisory did not bring the reinforcements generally expected in some quarters. Big Bob Gamage, 195-pound tackle, failed to get by the scholastic barriers, and Owen Bromley, a promising backfield man, also failed to rouse out of the doldrums of poor marks. Both had been expected to bring the Red team some much-needed streigth.

However, John McCracken and Carroll Price, a couple of able ends, were made eligible and both will start at the Western wings. Another first-stringer was lifted to the ranks of the eligibles in Joe Oliphant, one of the few experienced men Ahern has available. Oliphant, a good center and an equally good guard, is likely to get the call at right guard over Bill Donohue.

Line-Up Is Shifted.

The Western coach exhibited little reason for enthusiasm, however, despite the new men made available. A marked lack of reserve power in the backfield has forced him to move Charlie Wells from end to halfback due to the neck injury of Herb Frawley, one of the team's best defensive and blocking backs. Frawley may see action, however.

Quarterback John Hatch, whose passing and punting is likely to prove rather troublesome to the Easterners today, will be at his customary post with Blackie Brewer and Snake-hips Snead at the other backfield berths.

Chick DiGiulian, Eastern's punter and ball-carrier, may not be in the starting line-up due to a shoulder injury, and Roy Michaels may get the call. Jack Shugrue and Marshall Jacobs, two other able backfield man made eligible by the advisory, are virtually certain to see action.

Fishburne, Staunton Will Battle Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 4.—Well on its way to the prep school championship of Virginia, Fishburne Military Academy will face the defending champions of Staunton Military Academy Saturday afternoon at Staunton in the game likely to decide the State's leading team of the season.

Fishburne has defeated five straight rivals, including Woodberry Forest, 7 to 0; University of Virginia Reserves, 13 to 2; Randolph-Macon Academy, 59 to 0; Virginia Episcopal, 21 to 0, and Fork Union Military. On November 22, Fishburne will meet Miller School at Waynesboro, and on Thanksgiving Day Augusta Military at Waynesboro.

The Play That Ousted C. U. From Unbeaten List

Too late, Halfback Dixie Walker, of Catholic University, stops the progress of Fullback Heim, of De Paul, in the third quarter at Chicago. Heim's touch down, on an end run, provided the winning margin of De Paul's 9-6 victory that removed C. U. from the unbeaten ranks.

Bruises Adorn Gridders of Virginia

Team Gets Respite Before Beginning Hard Work for Generals.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Nov. 4.—Virginia's regulars did a little breath catching this afternoon before beginning the job of pointing for the Washington and Lee eleven which wil lbe played next Saturday afternoon in Lexington.

Archie ahn, trainer, was the busiest of all the Cavalier athletic staff. A check up on those who played through the battering game with Maryland last week showed no serious injuries, but a bumper crop of bruises, sprains and sore muscles that needed his expect ministrations.

Coach Gus Tebell called for little from those regulars who reported for this afternoon's practice. He gave most of his attention to the second stringers, as he cast a wishful eye about to see what men he could call upon for replacements for any regulars who have to be held out of the game against the Generals.

Much praise has been heaped upon the Virginians for their determined stand on defense against the invading Old Liners with their veteran regulars and seasoned reserves. Capt. John Leys, Al Seccombe, George Seibels, indeed all of the men in the line are coming in for commendation for the way they withstood repeated attacks.

Still Talk of Play.

But what the local fans are delighting to retell is every little feature of the brilliant 97-yard kick return for a touchdown, with its double lateral from Harry Martin to Bus Male and back again to Martin, who did the scoring.

Many are likening it to the scoring play Virginia used against the Navy in Annapolis. Against the Middies the thriller started with a forward pass from Martin to Male, and ended with a lateral from Male to Lays. Both times Male, the Cavalier quarter, timed his midfield throw perfectly as he was tackled, tossing to a man in the clear who carried the ball across.

Virginia's blocking was improved against Maryland, but the tackling was not all it might have been, especially on open plays in which runners crossed the line and penetrated the secondary defenses.

Sure, S. M. U. Wants Bowl Bid, Says Bell; Maps Air Attacks

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Nov. 4.—Genial Madison (Matty) Bell, head man of Southern Methodist's renowned aerial circus, let it slip today that his "wild hosses" will be gunning for Rose Bowl recognition in the stretch drive of their rocky schedule.

"Sure, we'll be trying for a Rose Bowl bid," snapped Bell, a remnant of the famous 'praying Colonels" of Centre College and now in his first year as head coach at Southern Methodist.

But Bell, who has brought perhaps the greatest of all Mustang teams through seven games without a dent, cast a gloomy look at the five remaining games on his schedule and predicted evil things for his air tricksters.

"Just look at those five games—U. C. L. A., University of Arkansas, Baylor, Texas Christian and Texas A. and M. Any one of them could beat us, but we will shoot the works in every game. Maybe we can win them all, but I don't think so."

To date his Mustangs have scored 196 points against the enemy's 12. Rice Institute Owls and University of Texas failed to scratch against the potent Methodist line. Washington University scored a touchdown in the 35-6 licking they took and, Hardin-Simmons, a bruising small Texas College, also counted against the Methodists. Substitutes peppered the Mustang wall, however.

"It loks like Notre Dame just filed a claim on the Rose Bowl by beating Ohio State," commented Bell, "but we'll be trying."

Rose Bowl or no Rose Bowl, Bell said he had the finest ball carrier of them all in Bounding Bobby Wilson, 150-pound halfback sensation of the Southwest Conference. His 54 points lead the section's touchdown parade.

"Bobby Wilson comes nearer to everything in every play that any backfield man in the country. He is in perfect condition and is ready to go against the University of California at Los Angeles next Monday."

Bell disclosed that the "aerial circus" hadn't even unfolded its tent so far this season.

"We are going to pass and pass plenty the remainder of the season. We resorted to very little aerial work in the 20-0 defeat we gave Texas Saturday because U. C. L. A. scouts were in the stands, but we plan to cut loose at Los Angeles."

Bell will leave with 32 of his Mustangs to California Thursday, stopping off at Tucson, Ariz., Friday afternoon for the lone workout before the game.

Barred Horseman Files Writ Action

Seeks Transcript of Moves Leading to Ouster.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Suit for a writ of certiorari, directing Illinois Racing Commission members to bring to court a complete transcript of proceedings whereby J. D. Mikel, race horse breeder, was ruled off all tracks by the commission last summer, was filed by Mikel's attorney, Charles J. Michal, in Superior Court today.

Mikel filed suit for $250,000 damages against three stwards and two veterinarians of the Lincoln Fields race course, charging slander, last week. Superior Court Judge James J. Kelly ordered the writ returnable before the court for hearing on December 2.

Lincoln Feilds stwerds ruled Mikel off the tracks on a charge that he entered a horse, My Bane, in a 2-year-old maiden race when, according to the stewards, the horse actually was 3 years old.

Moorefield Defeated; Is Ousted From Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 4.—Franklin High scored a 19-2 victory over Moorefield High here to eliminate the locals from the South Branch Valley League football race. The title will be decided this week when Petersburg High plays at Franklin. Pope, Stanley Eye and Propst scored for Franklin, with Pope making the extra point.

Thomas Beaten, 7-6, By LaSalle Institute

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 4.—La Salle Institute scored a 7-6 victory over Thomas High School, of Thomas, W. Va., under the local floodlights. Phil Fleming's place kick after a touchdown was the margin of victory for La Salle.

Last year, La Salle won over over Thomas, 13-12.

Layden Sees Cause for Worry

Pfefferle, Ace Tackle, Joins Pilney, Carideo on Injured List.

Silent on Possible Bid to Rose Bowl; Wait Finish of Season.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 4.—As a tide of congratulatory messages all but flooded Coach Elmer Layden, Notre Dame today counted up the cost of its thrilling football triumph over Ohio State today and found it high enough to cause considerable worry over Northwestern's invasion Saturday.

Three of the most valuable players on the team appeared to be definitely lost for the invasion of the Wildcats, who always give the fighting Irish a stiff battle.

Andy Pilney, spearhead of the story book victory over the "scarlet scourage,' and Fred Carideo, hard-smashing fullback, were definitely out. Coach Layden expected that, but today he was informed by the team physician, Dr. J. E. McMeel, that Dick Pfefferle, the team's only experienced tackle, probably would be missing from the line-up for at least a week.

Suffered Leg Injury.

Pfefferle suffered a leg injury in the Ohio State game, but it wasn't known until today. Dr. McMeel said he would be forced to remain in the university infirmary for a week.

"Pfefferle's injury, unexpected as it was, rather floors me," said Coach Layden. "I am wondering how we can get by a great Northwestern team. I'm hoping for the best, but I'm worried."

Except to say that Notre Dame still had three games left on its schedule—against Northwestern, Southern California and the Army—Coach Layden refused to discuss reports that the Fighting Irish were under consideration for the annual Rose Bowl game.

"We won't start thinking about any Rose Bowl game until we've finished the season," he remarked. "Any of those three teams can 'bowl' us over."

Probably the greatest flood of congratulatory messages since the immortal Knute Rockne returned from his triumph over Southern California in 1930 struck Notre Dame today. Coach Layden received wires from many "synthetic alumni" who have been silent over the bleak years. He read them all with deep satisfaction and with many a smile and then said:

"We were very fortunate to win from a great team."

Kentucky Derby Is Set For May 2, Says Winn

French Lick Springs, Ind., Nov. 4 (AP).—Col. Matt Winn, here for a bit of golf after the close of the racing season in Chicago, said today the 1936 running of the Kentucky Derby will be held Saturday, May 2, according to present plans.

BALTIMORE AMERICAN ALE

THESE crisp days of November make a gentle warmth quite acceptable — outside and in.

There's something about Baltimore American that just fits that picture. It looks like Autumn in its chummy brown bottle. It tastes like Autumn with its winey tang and nutty flavor. And it warms the cockles of your heart like an Autumn moon, or glowing embers.

Try a bottle this afternoon, or evening. You'll find it supplies that one last touch that makes Fall the best time of the year.

Georgia Tech—Its All-Time Honor Roll

Strupper in Back Field With Wycoff, Guyon and Hill.

TO the cyclone cellars men; here comes the All-Time Golden Tornado a rippin' and a twistin' across the red clay hills of Georgia! Students at an engineering school cannot devote as much time to football as those at some less exacting institutions, but the high-spirited, hot-blooded Southern boys who enroll at Georgia Tech take naturally to this virile game and play it with a dervish-like abandon typified by Stumpy Thomason, an Injun rubber idjit on a spree.

Thomason, a stubby, little halfback, seemed to bound clear off the turf as he hurtled past tacklers. Grant Field partisans cannot forget how this living stick of dynamite blew an undefeated University of Georgia team to smithereens in 1927. Stumpy scorned a head guard and his gollywog mop of hair stood on end as he careened down field.

You can appreciate the caliber of Georgia Tech's All-Time backfield when you learn that Thomason could only make the second team. Al Hill, inspirational skipper of Heisman's 1917 Golden Tornado, which buried all opposition under lopsided scores, could pilot the first backfield. He was a born leader of men, a tremendous blocker and a stone-waller on defense.

Joe Guyon, Thorpe's side-kick on the Carlisle Indians, lived up to his Pop Warner reputation at Georgia Tech and later carried on brilliantly as a professional. A mature boy, with the stamina and hard-fibered muscles peculiar to the Indian breed, Guyon dominated his pale-faced foes.

Everett Strupper, a cyclone in human form, was the flashiest of all Tech's ball-carriers. His dazzling runs, passes and kicks helped roll up 481 points for Georgia Tech in 1917. John Heisman, whose coaching career spanned 30 years, said of Strupper, "If I had to pick one back to make a score in a crisis I would choose Strupper from all the hundreds that I have coached."

Douglas Wycoff, renowned for his towering punts and beserk plunging, heads the parade of Tech's fullbacks with Father Lumpkin, who buried all opposition under lopsided scores, could pilot the first backfield. He was a born leader of men, a tremendous blocker and a stone-waller on defense.

Deduce Finishes Third After Wall Staves Off Threat.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Nov. 4. Legume, owned by Breckenridge Long, United States Ambassador to Italy, trained by Max Smart, Negro horseman, ridden by Nick Wall and named for the French word "vegetable," scored a smashing victory today in the Monocacy, the feature race of an interesting program at Baltimore's own race track.

Under the light weight of 98 pounds, Legume answered the whip of Wall to hold a length advantage over William H. Furst's Mantagna, which had a like margin over Mrs. H. L. Ughetta's Deduce as the important finish line was reached. Biography and Weston were the only others to accept the issue at a mile and a sixteenth.

Legume was only lukewarm in the wagering and paid a $12.30 mutuel.

It was evident from the start that Legume, by the French sire, Epinard, and out of the Irish mare, Shenanigan, would have to be dealt with. Wall sent him to the top at the clubhouse turn, with Deduce lapped on his saddle-cloth. This pair alternately were first and second in the run along the back stretch, with Mantagna just gaining momentum.

In the stretch Legume disposed of Deduce, but had to be placed under punishment to withstand the closing rush of Mantagna.

Double Pays $480.70.

Long shots again filled the important places in the daily double, and a pay-off of $480.70 was in order. Those who collected the small fortune were those who had purchased the combination of Staff Officer in the first and Happy Dear in the third race. The possible mutuels ranged from $137.30 on the tickets ending Blue Alice to $7,692.30 on those with Seedling, the second party.

The long-shot parade that marked Saturday's racing was carried over into today's opening contest. Staff Officer, at a pa-off of $28.10, led from flag fall to finish in a field of 11 ordinary sprinters. Far Cry made game but futile bid for the purse in the stretch run. Clapping Jane came from far back to be third.

An odds-on steeplechaser proved the winner of the day's jumping event. Help Me, from the Sanford Farm, needed no help. He merely toyed with his opposition while going the 2 miles and 13 fences and won by a city block. Bonnie Lad was always second and Bromora was always third. Six started and six finished, and there wasn't a poor jump made during the race. Help me helped the favorite players with a $3.30 mutuel.

Happy Dear Is Winner.

First-time starters ran first and second in the third race as Admiral Cary T. Grayson's Happy Dear led Lulu R to the wire. Miss Jones was third in the field of 11 competing over the 6-furlong course. Happy Dear was rushed to the front soon after the break and was never headed under clever urging by Jockey C. Reid. The daughter of Happy Argo paid a $19.50 mutuel.

A good share of the customers booed long and loud following the fourth race when Rosselli was given a nose decision over Good Visibility. Rosselli had been in front from the start and Good Visibility came up in the final drive. From where your correspondent sat, Rosseli appeared to be the winner. Good Visibility was bearing to the outside as the two horses hit the wire. Coucci had the mount on the winner, which paid $9.40.

The Ascot Stable's Steward defeated a formidable sprint field in the fifth race, winning handily from Epical and Headin Home. It was Jockey Silvio Coucci's second straight awinner and he rode a waiting race. Steward broke well, but Coucci rated him along just off the pace setters. Enetering the stretch, Steward bounded to the front and it was all over except the $3.60 pay-off.

Allegany High Trims Waynesboro, 20 to 19

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 4.—Allegany High won its first game from Waynesboro High of Waynesburg, Pa., since the teams first began the series in 1929, breaking a six-year "jinx." The score was 20-19.

A short pass, Lloyd Boor to Frank Jordano, for the extra point after the second Camper touchdown, was the margin of victory.

Waynesboro had a net gain of 132 yards over Allegany, but the locals chalked up ten first downs to eight and passed their way to victory. Four of the six touchdowns, two by each team, were the direct result of passes, while other times tosses placed the clubs in a scoring position.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAFF OFFICER, $28.10, $15.00, $9.30; FAR CRY, $8.30, $7.80; CLAPPING JANE (entry), $6.80.

STAFF OFFICER, nicely handled, was sent into a clear lead in the opening furlong, was nursed until challenged then under strong handling, responded willingly to withstand FAR CRY. Latter, in nearest attendance of the winner from the beginning, moved up fast to join the winner midway of the home stretch and fought it out stoutly to the finish. CLAPPING JANE bettered her position steadily, came through on the inside at the stretch turn and finished steutly. LADY'S BEAU went prominently, but failed to rally in the closing stages. SIT OUT broke well, but could not threaten the leaders. DOCTOR'S GIFT was outrun. ROLLING ALONG stopped. FLYING VICTORY was held safe.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000 allowances. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won galloping; place, easily. Went to post at 2:06. Off at 2:07. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HELP ME, $3.30, $2.90, $2.10; BONNIE LAD, $11.30, $3.10; BROMORA, $2.60.

HELP ME took command soon after the start, raced in hand for a turn and one-half of the field, then came out rapidly when released from restraint. BONNIE LAD had nice speed for the first mile and one-half, offered repeated challenges, but was held perfectly safe in the last half-mile. BROMORA struck several of his fences, recovered quickly and was easily best of others. BLACK FEATHER could not better his position at any stage. The others were far out of contention throughout.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. For 2-year-old maiden fillies. Start poor from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:41½. Winner, Cary T. Grayson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY DEAR, $19.50, $9.60, $8.10; LULU R., $10.30, $7.20; MISS JONES, $4.60.

HAPPY DEAR, hustled to the front shortly after the start, met stiff contention from MISS JONES in the first five furlongs, then continuing stoutly withstood LULU R. Latter, in the thick of contention all during the running, held on courageously under a strong drive. MISS JONES was a keen factor all during the running and was easily best of the others. CLEVER GIRL lacked speed to gain a forward position and was unable to menace in the final drive. BLUE ALICE broke tardily, worked her way up while saving ground, and closed a large gap. SEEDLING went evenly. DIFFER was outrun. MISS MARED had early speed.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:09. Winner, J. C. Palmer's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROSSELLI, $9.40, $4.90, $4.30; GOOD VISIBILITY, $5.60, $4.00; BOB'S BOYS, $7.00.

ROSSELLI sprinted into a clear lead when reaching the back stretch, met determined bids from ATHOLTON, then withstood a stout drive gamely to stall off GOOD VISIBILITY. Latter, slow to get going, improved her position rapidly in the last half-mile, swung to the outside and finished with a tremendous rush. BOB'S BOY went forwardly from the beginning, saved ground and came through on the inside during the closing stages to get third right at the end. ABBOT'S TRICK, miserably ridden, was taken up going into the final turn, then was messed about badly all during the last quarter-mile when Faust began looking over his shoulder. ABBOT'S TRICK showed a good effort and would have been much closer with intelligent handling. ATHOLTON forced a steady pace, was bumped entering the home stretch, and tired thereafter. MR. QUICK could not enter contention at any stage. TIME PIECE had no mishaps. WEDGE LAD ran out entering the back stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:37½. Winner, Ascot Stable's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEWARD, $3.60, $2.90, $2.40; EPICAL, $7.80, $4.70; HEADIN HOME, $3.40.

STEWARD went up fast midway of the back stretch to gain a contending position, swung to the outside entering the home stretch to wear down HEADIN HOME, then drew out nicely approaching the finish. EPICAL had nice speed from the start and outlasted HEADIN HOME in the closing stages. HEADIN HOME, a keen factor from the beginning, moved into a short lead at the final furlong pole, but weakened suddenly in the closing sixteenth. CONTE finished in determined fashion and was in tight quarters through the closing drive. GREEK FIRE lost ground in the last five-sixteenths. LAST BOAT met with slight interference midway of the back stretch and had to be eased back. SCATTER BRAIN could not threaten.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:03. Off at once. Winner, Breckinridge Long's ch. c. (3), by Epinard—Shenanigan. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGUME, $12.30, $5.50, $3.30; MANTAGNA, $3.90, $2.50; DEDUCE, $2.80.

LEGUME, racing in greatly improved fashion and having more speed than usual, carried WESTON out all down the back stretch, withstood stout contention from DEDUCE, but had to be vigorously ridden to stall off MANTAGNA. Latter ran upon horses' heels going to the first turn, responded readily after being eased back, and finished with a bold rush. DEDUCE was sent up on the inside of LEGUME when the latter bore out, drew on almost even terms, but faltered in the closing furlong. BIOGRAPHY was making up ground at the end. WESTON was carried out by the winner down the back stretch, then failed to rally after being taken back.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $900. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:29. Off at 4:31. Winner, Mrs. C. W. Williams' b. m. (5), by General Lee—Fluff. Trained by C. W. Williams. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 2-5, 2:01 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLUFFY LEE, $8.80, $3.80, $3.10; SHIP EXECUTIVE, $3.30, $2.70; LA CHERIE, $3.80.

FLUFFY LEE broke swiftly, went along smoothly until reaching the home stretch, was shaken up to draw clear, then had speed in reserve at the end. SHIP EXECUTIVE, permitted to settle in his best stride before engaging the leaders, circled his company in the last five-sixteenths and closed with good energy. LA CHERIE made frequent bids in the last five furlongs and held on gamely for the closing test. CANIMAR, a slow beginner, came through on the inside entering the home stretch and made up ground slowly. GOLDEN PLAY weakened in the last quarter-mile. SILENCE III closed with a tremendous rush after trailing far back. THREE DAGGERS tired.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:58. Off at 5:00½. Winner, Mrs. L. H. Nimkoff's ch. g. (3), by North Star III—Bed of Roses. Trained by P. Brady. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:40 3-5, 1:54 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG GAWK, $4.40, $3.30, $2.40; DUNAIR, $5.40, $2.90; AMERICAN BELLE, $2.90.

BIG GAWK, kept in close pursuit of the leaders from the beginning, was hard ridden in the last five-sixteenths, wore DUNAIR down inside the final furlong and came out gradually under punishment. DUNAIR withstood stiff contention from TOLIMATA in the first seven furlongs, saved ground, but was unable to resist the winner. AMERICAN BELLE, on the outside and kept within striking distance of the leaders, responded readily and finished with good courage. BUNTINO was racing gamely at the end. TOLIMATA tired. POST BRIGADE had no excuses. PENCADER was held safe.

Hagerstown Resumes After Player's Death

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 4.—The eleven resumed practice today, the Hagerstown High School football first time the squad has been out since the death of its star quarterback, John Farra, fatally injured in a game ten days ago at Mercersburg, Pa.

The local eleven, which won its first C. V. A. L. game from Allegany High, Cumberland, is pointing for Saturday's game with Handley High at Winchester, Va. Parents of team members voted last week to continue the schedule.

Sir Ridgeway Winner In Arlington Feature

Arlington Downs, Tex., Nov. 4 (AP). Sir Ridgeway won the $800 Mineral Wells Purse Race, fetaure of today's eight-race program at Arlington Downs.

Sir Ridgeway traveled the Waggoner course, about 6 furlongs, in 1:09 2-5 to finish a length in front of the favored Chanceview. Crete was third.

Battle of Ends Foreseen at Lexington

General and Cavalier Wing Stars Will Clash in Saturday Game.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Nov. 4.—Washington and Lee's home-coming day clasic here Saturday with the University of Virginia might well develop into a "battle of ends."

Holding down one of the wing positions, probably right end, will be the Generals' star punter, lanky Bill Ellis, of Ashland, Ky., who does about everything a football player could do and does it all very well.

At right end for the visiting Cavaliers will be their captain, John Leys, who like Ellis has been winning fine praise for his end play this season.

Both are candidates for mythical team honors this year.

The Cavalier captain, one of the mainstays in the team's offense as well as defense, has played two varsity games against the Generals and wil be one of the few regulars who faced Coach Tex Tilson's aggregations at the University last year, when W. and L. won, 20-0.

Punting Is Forte.

Ellis makes a specialty of punting and a game seldom passes that does not see him shoving the offensive outfit back with long-distance spirals. However, he can pass and run with the ball on occasions, dropping back from his end position to become a triple-threat man.

Both Leys and Ellis are playing their last year of collegiate football, and both will be sorely missed by their coaches next year.

At the other end position for the Generals this Saturday will be Charlie Brasher, of Rutherford, N. J., a speedy junior who gets down under punts so fast that he sometimes has trouble stopping his charge in time to get his man. Cullen Wilkin plays at the opposite end of the Cavalier line.

Washington and Lee fraternity houses today began making active plans for decorating in competition for the silver loving cup awarded the best decorated house by the alumni association of the university. Sigma Phi Epsilon won the contest last year.

As another feature of the weekend, a cup will be awarded the fraternity that registers the largest number of alumni back for the annual home-coming festivities, which will be climaxed with a dance at Doremus gymnasium Saturday evening.

1935 Tigers Best Says Owner Navin

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 4.—After more than 30 years in the game, Frank J. Navin picks his latest Tiger aggregation, the 1935 world champions, as the most courageous baseball club he ever owned.

The Detroit owner paid tribute to the fighting ability of the old-time teams when such stars as Hughey Jennings, the brilliant Ty Cobb, "Wild Bill" Donovan, and "Wahoo Sam" Crawford wore the Tiger uniform, but declared that the team that licked the scrappy Chicago Cobs in the World Series topped them all for downright pluck.

"They showed real courage when Hank Greenberg was injured and couldn't play as the series continued in Chicago," Navin said. "None of my other teams ever had such a break against them."

Hagerstown Eleven Defeats Cumberland

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 4.—The Hagerstown Collegians, local semi-pro football team, defeated the Cumberland (Md.) Ramblers here yesterday, 12 to 0. The first touchdown was made on the kick-off, when Wolfe, left halfback, racing down the field after the kick-off, fell on the ball behind the Ramblers' goal line after it had been fumbled. Garrison scored the second touchdown on a 55-yard run in the third quarter.

Mt. St. Mary's Will Stress Passes

Will Resume Training for Washington College Tilt Saturday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

EMMITSBURG, Md., Nov. 4.—Entering the final fortnight of their 1935 football schedule, Mount St. Mary's will begin training here tomorrow for their game on Saturday with Washington College at Chestertown.

Jo-Jo Lawler, Mount coach, will concern himself chiefly with passing practice for the next two or three days. Admitting that this is the weakest point in the play of his team, he is anxious to achieve a better degree of perfection. The drills, however, will not be intensive.

Stan Simonovich, the last of a long string of injured regulars to return to active duty, was not permitted to perfrom in last week's victory over Johns Hopkins in order that he might rest further for the game against Washington.

Saturday's game will be the third the Mount has played in as many weeks against Maryland colleges. They will wind up their season one week from Saturday when they meet Baltimore University here.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 4.

Dear Al:

It seems that we were right yesterday when we said that Grand Slam would have been disqualified had he defeated Hollyrood in the Futurity here Saturday. Today brought a communication from the stewards announcing the suspension of Jockey Harry Richards, who rode Grand Slam, for the remainder of the meeting for "tactics detrimental to the best interests of racing." All of which means that officials believe that Richards purposely carried Hollyrood wide at the head of the stretch. Bowie will offer a gold watch for the leading rider during the meeting this month. This is the first time that any track other than Havre de Grace has rewarded the winning jockey. Joseph B. Boyle, general manager of the Prince Georges plant, also announced that he will give trophies to the winners of the W. P. Burch and Thomas K. Lynch memorial races. George D. Widener's Sation will be retired after his appearance here tomorrow. The big son of Galetian has a remarkable sprint record, having won with 140 pounds up this season. BILL.

First race—Boocard defeated a similar field at Laurel and should he run back to that effort he should take the main division of this purse. Adams Eve was a long time winning but she has improved. Should be a prominent figure in this company. Tody Con just missed defeating a cheap field at Laurel.

Second race—Santi Quaranti is asked to carry only steadying weight in the steeplechase field. That winning effort at the other course was impressive and I'm going to string along. Capstan ran out twice at Laurel. If Jockey McCarthy keeps him on the course he's going to be a keen factor. Dock Light ran a nice race behind Blackcock last out. May improve and take it all.

Third race—Gold Seeker and Big Dinner, a pair of brisk workers, are likely to battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both afe fit as hands can make them and have drawn good riders. Flaing Swords, with Robertson up, looms as a serious contender.

Fourth race—Mid Victorian seems to have found a spot that suits and with Robertson to do the booting, I see no reason for mistakes. Any price will be a good one. Marcella Miss has shown keen form of late and is the one to beat. Dancing Doll's best would put her close.

Fifth race—Miss Mona, sharpened in the sprints, wil lhave a lot to say about the distribution of this purse. She sems capable of handling the top weight asisgnment. Cir Ten downed a good field last out. Pomposity for the show.

Sixth race—Soon Over, Only One and Station is the way I prefer them in the Baltimore handicap. Al lare familiar with the sprint route and I look for a keen stretch battle. Clorker Mike is around with the word on Gold Foam. This one has worked wel land may be dangerous.

Seventh race—Arab might have won that last with a better break at the start. Came from far back to finish with excellent courage. More alert handling tomorrow would bring a set of brackets. Buck Langhorne is on the improve. Patient Saint to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Slave has been groomed for a winning effort in this kind of company. An energetic ride would find this fellow in front at the end. Our Ship is far too keen to be overlooked. Brad gets in light and may be a keen factor.

Best bet—Miss Monoa.

Virginia Tech Gunning for Wolfpack

Goblers Aim to Upset N. C. State for Second Year in Succession.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Nov. 4.—Having swept over the ramparts of the Washington and Lee Generals and scattered the feathers of the South Carolina Gamecocks on successive Saturdays, Virginia Tech's up-and-at-em Gobblers are sharpening their spurs for a fighting foray upon the Wolves of North Carolina State next Saturday in Portsmouth.

The Gobblers will go into battle against the Wolfpack carrying memories of an upset triumph over State last year and determined to play just as daring and spirited football again this week.

Their weapons will be a sharp-edged running attack that has gained power since mid-October and an aerial game of increasing potency. To these weapons the men of Tech expect to add their traditional fighting spirit and the confidence that recent successes has brought.

Smith Has Successor.

George Smith, Tech's 1934 captain, was the chief engineer of the Techmen's triumph a year ago. Perhaps big Foots Dickerson, who led the charge that conquered W. and L. and South Carolina, can take up the fight where Smith left off.

To his hard-driving tactics as a runner, Dickerson will add his mounting prowess as a passer, and his exceptional ability on defense. Mel Henury, Marvin Cregger and Wilburt Kennedy are three backfield mates capable of keeping pace with Dickerson in goalward drives.

Jack Carpenter is coming along fast as a blocking back. George Sodaro adds a threat in the dual role of blocker and ball carrier.

It matters not how high the backfield men may rise in Tech's football heavens, the game will be won or lost in the line. Line Coach Tex Tilson will drill the Gobbler linemen hard this week. He expects to see his men reap plenty of trouble in the parth of the greater manpower in State's forewall.

He will seek not only to perfect blocking assignments but to throw up a defense capable of halting the rampages of Cowboy Robinson, Ed Berlinski and other fine Wolfpac ball toters.

Great Stars Named At Georgia Tech

kin right on his heels. Lumpkin had even more drive than Wycoff but lacked the former's versatility. Red Barron, a beautiful free-strider, had an edge of Judy Harlan and Tiger Flowers.

Peter the Great Pund key-stone of the 1928 champions would snap the ball for the all-timers. His remarkable exhibition of center play was a big factor in Tech's Rose Bowl victory over California. Pup Phillips, center on the Golden Tornado era teams, was another pippin.

Raleigh Drennon, burly blocker on Bill Alexander's Rose Bowl victors, was perhaps Tech's most useful guard, though Walter Goodwin's consistent performance can't be overlooked.

Bill Flincher's vicious charging gave the Golden Tornado backs the openings they needed to go places. He would pair at tackle on the All-Time team with Vance Maree, a giant Frenchman, who "refused to be moved out of there" by any of Georgia Tech's 1928 opponents.

Frank Waddey and Tom Jones, twin typhoons down under kicks and passes, were vital factors in the 1928 team's march to Pasadena. John Staton, a grand offensive end, had the knack of getting position on the defensive tackle.

General Motors Declares 50c Extra Dividend

Quarterly 50 Cents on the Common Also Is Ordered.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—Directors of the General Motors Corporation today voted an extra dividend of 50 cents and a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock. Three months ago the corporation paid 50 cents regular and 25 cents extra. Previous to that time regular dividends of 25 cents quarterly were paid with occasional extras. Both dividends are payable December 12 to stock of record November 14.

Financial circles had been divided in their guesses as to whether the major automobile company would increase its extra payment at this time. The common stock of the company, along with Chrysler, was subjected to profit taking on the Stock Exchange during today's session. It closed at $54.37, off 25 cents.

The corporation's preliminary statement for the September quarter showed net profit equal to 63 cents a common share, against $1.16 in the second quarter and 48 cents in the September quarter last year.

For the nine months the net profit is equal to $2.51 a share, against $1.90 a share last year.

Gen. Motors Sells T. & W. Air Holdings

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—John D. Hertz, partner in Lehman Bros., announced today that he had made arrangements to purchase the entire holdings of General Motors Corporation in Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc. Hertz said the transaction would be closed tomorrow.

He negotiated this purchase, he said, on behalf of Lehman Bros. and Floyd B. Odlum, of Atlas Corporation.

The purchase was believed in Wall Street to represent working control of the air line, although considerably less than a majority of the shares.

Credit Corp. Returns 36% to Railroads

The Railroad Credit Corporation, according to report as to its financial condition filed yesterday with the Interstate Commerce Commission and participating carriers, has, through liquidating distributions since June 1, 1933, returned $26,491,858 or 36 per cent of the net emergency freight revenues collected by it.

Of this amount, $12,045,212 has been in cash and $14,446,646 in credits on obligations due to the corporation.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Market Steadies and Edges to New High After Substantial Profit Taking; Bonds Hold Firm.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Nov. 4.—Selective buying in a few groups and individual issues in the stock market today finally buoyed an irregular market at the close. After a steady to firm opening, profit taking in the motors and a few of the higher-priced industrials, such as Allied Chemical, off more than 4 points at one time, although only fractionally down at the close, gave the list a ragged appearance.

As the day wore on buying came into scattered groups, notably the rubber shares, some of the oils, steels, rails, utilities and non-ferrous metals, and by the final gong a moderately improved tone was the rule throughout the list.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained .2 of a point on the day at 53.2, which was sufficient to carry it to a new high for 1935, and in fact, to the best level since September, 1931.

The trading pace was less rapid than in recent sessions, though still rather brisk at times. Turnover in the Stock Exchange was 1,752,840 shares.

Italian Bonds Strong.

Bond market traders generally ignored the mild irregularity most of the day in stocks and the general tone in the loans list was steady. Italian bonds staged a sharp up-rush with gains of 1 to 5 points in important issues. United States Government obligations were mostly a little improved.

Commodities were a negligible influence on other markets, and generally pursued a rather uncertain course. Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ of a cent a bushel lower at Chicago and corn was up ¼ to ¾ of a cent. The finish in cotton ranged between a loss of 25 cents a bale and a gain of 10 cents.

The overnight news of the abandonment of the silver currency basis in China and the nationalization of the metal had little effect on securities as a whole, but brought some buying into one or two of the silver shares for a time on the theory that concentration of China's silver supplies in the hands of the government, if it could actually be accomplished, would lessen the floating supply of the metal. Bar silver firmed slightly in London but was unchanged in New York at 65⅜ cents an ounce.

The news likewise failed to unsettle the general run of foreign currencies in relation to the American unit although the Hongkong dipped 4.12½ cents at 38.12½ cents and Shanghai balances lost ⅞ of a cent at 30.25 cents.

Trade News Good.

Business news continued on the whole encouraging, even though its character was a little mixed. Current steel operations were off an even point at 50.9 per cent of capacity, but the magazine Steel reported a better demand from automobile makers which was likely to increase further, and an unexpected rise in tin plate requirements from can makers.

Students of the technical condition of the market noted that while the open market value of stocks listed on the stock exchange, as of November 1, had risen some $1,500,000,000 since the beginning of the previous month to approximately $43,000,000,000, collateral borrowings of all members of the exchange amounted to only 1.84 per cent of the value of the securities, compared with 1.93 per cent at the beginning of October, indicating a continuation of a preponderance of cash buying.

50 N. Y. Stocks Rise 40 Per Cent in Year

New York, Nov. 4, 1935.—The market value of 50 representative stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange at the close of business for the week ended November 2, was $16,163,953,625, a decrease of $27,513,000, or 17 per cent campared with the market vaue of $16,191,466,625 at the close of the preceding week, according to a compilation by Paul H. Davis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange.

At the close of the corresponding week a year ago, the same 50 stocks had a market value of $11,549,568,875, indicating an increase during the year of $4,614,384,750, or 39.95 per cent.

Institute Estimates Steel Capacity 50.9%

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Steel production during the current week is estimated by the American Iron & Steel Institute at 50.9 per cent of capacity compared with 51.9 per cent in the preceding week and 49.7 per cent a month ago.

At this time last year production was at the rate of 26.3 per cnet of capacity.

Wheat Prices Sag In Light Trading

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Persistent uncertainty over the Canadian government's grain selling policy, together with weakness of Winnipeg quotations, dominated wheat values today, and dragged the Chicago market lower.

Chinese Dollar Drops Abruptly In N. Y. Market

Follows Abandonment of Silver Standard by Shanghai Government.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—Chinese dollars declined sharply in the New York foreign exchange market today following abandonment of the silver standard by the Shanghai government. Hongkong dollars dropped 4.25 cents to 38 cents, the lowest level since July, 1934, and Shanghai dollars yielded 1.26 cents to 29.87 cents.

Foreign exchange traders at the large New York banks reported only a small amount of business done in both units in the local market due to the fact that trading commenced in London several hours earlier and whatever adjustments found necessary had apparently been effected there.

Abandonment of the silver standard by the Chinese had long been forecast by informed quarters both in that country and in New York principally as a result of the silver buying program initiated more than a year ago by the United States Government and Sunday's announcement caused no major disturbance to other world currencies.

London, Nov. 4 (AP).—Monetary reforms put into effect today by the Chinese government caused only a moderate disturbance to silver and Far Eastern exchanges in the London markets.

Silver market observers were of the opinion that abandonment of the silver standard and other reforms put into effect in China would not weaken world markets for silver unless the United States Government changed its buying policy.

Hongkong dollars declined to 18 9-16 pence, against Saturday's rate of 20⅞, while Shanghai dollars yielded to 14 9-16 pence, compared with Saturday's 15.

Stable Dollar-Pound Held Fool's Paradise

Urbana-Champaign, Ill., Nov. 4.—The present apparent stabilization of the dollar and the pound may prove to be the perfect "fool's paradise," Prof. Ivan Wright, banking authority on the University of Illinois faculty, said here today before the university conference on banking. Stabilization without the revival of international trade and finance indicates the lack of confidence and the insurmountable trade barriers, Dr. Wright pointed out. The present stabilization was strained and unnatural, he said. "If the pound-dollar stabilization was economically sound trade would increase between these two countries as trade increased when stabilization took place after the World War."

Record Turbine Will Be Built By Gen. Electric

Appalachian Power Co., of Logan, W. Va., to Install Great Generator.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—The American Gas & Electric Co. announced today plans for installing in the Logan, W. V., plant of the Appalachian Electric Power Co. a 40,000-kilowatt steam turbine and electric generator, said to be the largest of that type ever built. Cost of the entire development was authoritatively estimated at $3,500,000, and present plans call for complete installation by mid 1937. The General Electric Co. will build the machinery at its Schenectady, N. Y., plant.

Described as a 40,000-kilowatt, 1,250-pound, 925-degree (temperature) steam turbine and electric generator, Philip Sporn, vice president in charge of engineering of American Gas, said, "the turbine and generator will be the largest of their type ever built.

"The turbine will operate at a higher temperature than any heretofore built in the United States," he continued.

Cooled by Hydrogen Gas.

"The generator will not only be the largest ever built for 3,600 revolutions per minute, but will also be cooled by hydrogen gas instead of by air.

"The Appalachian Electric Power Co. and the American Gas & Electric Co. have contributed a great deal of development work in hydrogen cooling of other rotating machines, but this will be the first time that hydrogen will be used on a turbine generator.

AT YOUR SERVICE

Washington's Largest Trust Company

THE American Security is Washington's largest trust company, but size alone does not explain why seventy thousand people bank here and make use of our facilities. They like the way we serve them. They have faith in our policies.

Of course, size may be an excellent reason for selecting a bank. When a bank has become large and influential from small beginnings, it is reasonable to assume that its principles are soundly conceived. And to identify yourself with an alert, progressive bank is good business.

The American Security is here to serve the financial interests of Washington people and Washington business. We have been serving both, with marked success, since 1889. We would like to serve you, too, whether your account is large or small. Won't you come in and talk things over.
